Parents Balk At U. S.-Paid Trip Here for Son's Medal

By the Associated Press

Helenville, Wis., Oct. 20.—An elderly couple sat in a modest home here today, fingered a Congressional Medal of Honor and slowly read and reread a letter from Secretary of War Stimson.

The medal and letter had come in the mail to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gruennert because they had wanted it that way and so had written the Secretary of War. It had been awarded in death to their son, 20-year-old Sergt. Kenneth E. Gruennert, who was killed in New Guinea last Christmas Eve.

"The spirit of unselfishness, understanding and sacrifice which breathes through your letter has deeply impressed not only the President, who requested a copy for himself, but all of us in the War Department who have been privileged to read your letter," the Secretary of War wrote in answer to the Gruennerts.

"We stand humble in the face of such a demonstration of patriotism as yours. . . ."

The War Department had asked the Gruennerts to come to Washington to receive the medal from the President. They didn't believe they should. Instead they wrote to the War Department. It took a long time to write, but this is what it said:

"We feel honored indeed to receive a Medal of Honor for our departed son, to be delivered to us personally by the President of the United States.

"Under present conditions, however, we cannot help but give expression to some of the following thoughts which race through our minds day and night.

"We are now in the midst of the Third War Bond drive. We believe every cent of money subscribed should be used to supply our boys with the necessities of war and not spent for trips that do not directly help the war effort.

"Only this last week, thousands of other parents lost their loved ones on the battlefields of Italy, all brave boys they were loved by their parents as much as we loved our own. These parents cannot all converge on Washington, and because of the common bond we have with them we feel we shouldn't either. The loss of our brave boy is still too fresh in our memory for us to make this trip, ever though it would be in his honor.

"Will you please convey our regrets to the President? Will you please ask him whether it would be possible for him to put whatever message he may have for us in writing, so it may be delivered to us along with the Medal of Honor and we will ever cherish and treasure them both in the memory of our boy."

In Washington the War Department said the medal had been awarded for "leadership so outstanding that it placed victory above the life of the leader himself."

Gruennert was killed when he advanced alone ahead of the platoon of which he was second in command and made it possible for the platoon to split the Japanese position on the beach near Buna.

In the course of the fighting Gruennert knocked out one enemy pillbox single-handed and drove the occupants of another into the open where they were routed by his men. He was shot by enemy snipers before the platoon could reach his advanced position.

Asks Representation Instead

District Home Rule Proposal Opposed by Board of Trade

Opposition by the Board of Trade to the McCarran Home Rule proposal for Washington, which carried as an alternative a recommendation that the District be represented in Congress, was announced at the first fall meeting last night in the Willard Hotel. The board of directors, empowered to act for the association, made their decision Monday.

A plea for food subsidies by Judge Fred M. Vinson, Director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, to curtail inflation, and an announcement by Third War Loan Chairman John A. Reilly that "a fourth loan is coming in January, in which, if the volunteer subscriptions aren't enough, the Government may make savings mandatory" were other features of the meeting which was attended by approximately 3000 in the main ballroom.

The board members were told by their directors that they felt "that the present form of Commission government generally has worked well" and that "it is questionable if any method can be employed, within the Constitution, which could accomplish a practical result of delegating the powers that now rest in the Congress to a local governing group, giving to the residents of the District of Columbia local autonomy."

The directors held, further, according to their report, that "there is no definition of the legislative power retained by the Congress and of the ordinance-making power of the Commissioners," in the bill.

Continuing the list of reasons why the board disapproved the McCarran bill, the report said "it is unlikely that Congress would ever relinquish its exclusive power over District fiscal matters either for the purpose of taxation or appropriation." The directors also said "it is not believed that administration of District affairs would be brought materially closer to the people" by the Home Rule proposal if it were to become law.

The directors said "a solution to the complex problem of municipal government for the National Capital will not be obtained without voting participation in the Congress, and therefore the Board of Trade has consistently advocated

Quarantine Urged in District After Rabid Dog Bites 2 Women

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

A rigid quarantine of all dogs in the Washington area was proposed by health officers meeting here yesterday while two women planned to begin Pasteur treatments this morning after being bitten by a rabid dog Tuesday.

A three-point program for permanent control of rabies in the Metropolitan area was outlined by local and county health chiefs following disclosure by the District Health Department that the dog that bit the women was infected.

The women were Mrs. Estelle Kirby, 63, of 2834 28th st. nw., and Mrs. Theresa Brown, Negro, 54, of 939 25th st. nw., the dog's owner.

In the meantime, workers at the District Pound received orders to pickup at least three other dogs which may have been infected in the area between Wisconsin and Connecticut aves. Tuesday. They were believed to have been bitten by the dog found rabid.

The meeting under the direction of Dr. George C. Ruhland yesterday proposed the following recommendations:

1. Rigid quarantine of all dogs in the Washington area unless on leash by an adult and this to continue for the duration of the rabies crisis.

2. Immediate measures be adopted to capture and destroy all stray dogs in the area.

3. All dogs which have been in contact with rabid animals be destroyed or quarantined for six months or otherwise taken care of in a manner approved 6 by the local health officer.

It was pointed out that there were 200 rabid dogs in the Washington area this summer and fall and that unless the disease is curtailed immediately the Washington area may be plagued by it for another two years. Vaccination of animals was recommended although, officials said it was not 100 per cent effective. The public was also warned there were numerous cases of dumb rabies where the animal showed no exterior signs of having the disease.

Others attending the meeting were Dr. H. W. Schoening, chairman, United States Bureau of Animal Industry; Dr. William De Kline, chairman of the public health committee of the District

37% of Quota Pledged

Leaders of 4 War Fund Units To Report on Progress Today

Leaders of all four divisions of the Community War Fund, representing about 19,000 volunteer workers, will meet together for the first time today to report their progress toward Washington's $4,800,000 goal.

As the Metropolitan Division began house-to-house canvassing yesterday, $1,764,139.93—37 per cent of the quota—already had been solicited in business and Government offices and from donors of past years.

Current collections were made by Business and Finance, $392,354.90; Advance Gifts, $309,567.29, and Government, $1,062,217.74.

Additions to these figures, with the first reports from Metropolitan after one day of solicitation, will be released today at the joint fund session in the Hall of Flags, United States Chamber of Commerce, 12:30 p. m. Latest tabulated returns will be listed on a progress chart.

Guests of honor at today's report meeting will be representatives of the three fronts for which the fund seeks support—USO and other war hospitality, United Nations War Relief and local community welfare.

Similar report meetings are scheduled for all four divisions on Monday, October 25; Wednesday, October 27, and Friday, October 29.

Fund workers, meanwhile, began contacting homes in the city and in Prince Georges, Arlington, Fairfax and Montgomery Counties, where volunteers are soliciting both indi-

War Blamed for Increase

District Court Disposes Of 30 Divorce Suits Daily

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

Approximately 30 divorce suits are being disposed of in District Court every day, with an unprecedented number of cases involving marital difficulties on file.

There has been no relaxing of conditions under which divorce decrees are granted. The increase can be attributed to wartime conditions, court officials said.

About 75 per cent of the divorce suits are uncontested, with more than 80 per cent granted by the court.

Since July 1, 484 divorce cases were disposed of. Of these, 420 were uncontested. The majority were heard during the last month.

The halls outside of the three courtrooms hearing divorce suits are crowded daily with women and attorneys who admit this is their most prosperous year.

When the uncontested suits on file are disposed of, it is expected that the daily number of cases heard will lessen.

During last fiscal year 1900 divorce suits were disposed of. During 1939 only 480 cases were filed with the court.

Five reasons were given for the increase in cases.

1. The increase of population here since 1939, with the resultant breaking up of homes elsewhere.

2. Restrictions on travel to divorce centers such as Nevada and Florida. Furthermore, the courts now have before them questions of the validity of quick Nevada di-

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Thursday), Oct. 21.—Several thousand troops are locked in bitter fighting along the Song River north of Finschhafen, New Guinea, where the Japanese are attempting to cut through elements of the Australian Ninth Division to the sea to join other enemy troops.

These Australians, famed heroes of El Alamein, in Egypt, and the October 2 captors of Finschhafen, killed more than 200 Japanese Tuesday in repulsing a series of fierce attacks but a headquarters spokesman said today the enemy has made some progress toward the mouth of the Song River.

It was the second straight day on which the spokesman told of progress by Japanese forces moving out of Sattelberg, 15 miles northwest of Finschhafen.

Air Attack Ineffective

Tuesday morning, the Japanese air force made an ineffective attempt to support the ground units. Fourteen planes dropped 86 bombs in advance of their attacking troops without causing damage or casualties.

Inland to the northwest, Australians moving up the Ramu Valley against Madang have extended their grip.

The enemy apparently concentrated his strength in the jungle at Sattelberg mission after Finschhafen's fall.

The Japanese went over to the offensive in that sector after a series of defeats, beginning in early September, during which they lost the air bases of Lae, Salamaua and Finschhafen. These bases are on the Huon Gulf, a potential springboard for Allied invasion of Japan's pivotal position of New Britain.

In the Solomons, another American raid in the southern Bougainville area has resulted in the downing of 17 Japanese planes out of a

Rush Reserves To Dnieper Bend To Break Trap; Reds Gain 6 Miles

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Oct. 21.—Moscow dispatches said today that a large-scale German evacuation of the Crimea was underway as the Russians raced to outflank the peninsula from the north and tore at the last thin protective shell from the east.

Reuters said that information brought back to Moscow through the German lines indicated that Nazi divisions garrisoned in the Crimea were fleeing through the last railroad open to them, via the Perekop land bridge.

The Germans were desperately piling reserves and bombers into the Dnieper River bend to the north but the Russians, already west of the Crimea, sent spearheads 6 miles farther on, killed 1500 Nazis and reached down a railway to within 35 miles of a major objective—Krivoi Rog, key railway junction and iron mine center.

Encirclement Strategy

These gains, reported by the Moscow midnight communique and recorded by the Soviet monitor here, appeared aimed at trapping the Germans defending the Dnieper bulge. Soviet success here would make the Crimea untenable for the Nazis.

In addition, the Russians cleaned out new districts of Melitopol, east of the Crimea, where for more than a week the Germans have waged desperate block-by-block war. Beyond Melitopol lay miles of flat, virtually undefensible steppe and the Crimea.

In the Dnieper bend battle, where the Nazis faced their greatest debacle since Stalingrad, Germans were hurriedly swung from other sectors to meet the Russians pouring through a major break in the front south of Kremenchug. One spearhead swept into Zheltye-Vody, where guns and stores were captured.

Last Rail Exit

This town is on the railroad leading south from Pyatikhatka, captured Tuesday, and is 49 miles south of Kremenchug. The line leads directly to Krivoi Rog, the capture of which would seal the last railroad exit for the German divisions in the great bend of the river between Kremenchug and Zaporozhe.

South of Rechitsa, in the Gomel area, the Russians pushed out their

Department of Justice Called Into Brewster Investigation

Post Staff Writer

Congressional demand for Justice Department action in the case of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. was foreshadowed at the close of a dramatic hearing before the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday when Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia asked that representatives of the criminal division attend hearings.

The committee counsel, Robert Kline, last night invited Tom E. Clark, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division, or his representatives, to be present as the subcommittee explores the scandals connected with the Brewster plants.

Vinson, sitting ex officio, declared it was "obvious that certain things discussed here will have to be referred to the Department of Justice," after hearing Frederick Riebel, jr., former Brewster president, testify as to the defiance of the Selective Service system, the Navy and the Brewster Corp., expressed by Tom D. Lorenzo, boss of Local 285, UAW-CIO.

"Last June 17," Riebel told the committee, "De Lorenzo appeared at my office to tell me all pledges of cooperation with the Kaiser-Riebel management were off and he was declaring war on me."

There were four major issues, Riebel said, which caused the "declaration of war," several months after the union leader had, in the words of the witness, agreed that "we would be Henry, Tom and Fred and work together like brothers."

The first issue involved a strip tease show the management wished to give for its employes.

In order to honor employes of 3 to 25 years, the management had special buttons printed and chartered "The Star and Garter" show, starring Gypsy Rose Lee, in New York, sending out invitations in the name of the management to the entertainment at which it was planned to present the service buttons.

Union representatives, headed by Marco Sicalo, had already planned a get-together for plant employes and requested that the invitations go out jointly from management and union, with the union sharing part of the expense.

"I said to hell with that, Marco," Riebel testified. "This show is going to be given in the name of Brewster."

Riebel explained that the union, not the company, would receive the publicity if the show were given jointly.

Second Front Believed Topic At Moscow

Hull, Molotov, Eden Discuss Military Matters for 4 Hours

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Oct. 20.—Foreign Ministers of the three great Allied powers grappled for four hours today without difficulties with military problems, presumably including the question of a British-American invasion of western Europe which is desired by Russia.

Whatever may be the final outcome of the conference it was learned that United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, with their military aides, had a congenial discussion of the first subject to be thrashed out at the tripartite conference here.

To Discuss Anything

Two military men—United States Maj. Gen. John R. Deane and British Lieut. Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay—sat in at today's meeting, indicating the second front was discussed. Aides participating in the conversations will change as the various problems wherein they are experts come before the conference.

A British spokesman told American newsmen that Britain had agreed to discuss anything the Russians wished to discuss.

Newsmen here understood that both Eden and Hull had been favorably impressed with the proceedings to date.

Eight Lost in First 'Double-Barrel' Protection Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 20.—United States Eighth Air Force bombers blasted the metal plant at Duren, in western Germany, and the airfield at Gilze-Rijen, Holland, in daylight raids today from which eight bombers failed to return, a communique announced tonight.

Eleven enemy fighters were declared destroyed in this raid in which a new double-barreled fighter escort technique was used to meet the challenge of the fierce Nazi opposition.

Duren is 22 miles southwest of Cologne. The raid involved a round trip of at least 480 miles from British bases and was the first time that the small Ruhr city was attacked.

An indication that the RAF meant to keep up the newly started pace, which ended a six-day lull in offensive air activity, came tonight as several Danish and German radio stations signed off abruptly.

A number of high-flying German planes swept over London tonight for the fifth time in as many nights. The capital put up the heaviest barrage heard in a long time. Some bombs were dropped and rescue crews searched for victims. Two other raiders were believed shot down in the northeast England area.

The Gilze-Kijen airfield, 60 miles east of Flushing, last was attacked by U. S. heavy bombers August 19

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 20.—In the ugliest of moods and venting their wrath on the Italian civil population, the Germans fell back from the scorched Volturno Valley today to a new mountain line along Massico Ridge after being threatened by a swift American advance of 5 miles on their left flank.

Reconnaissance showed heavy concentrations of German troops on the high ground north of Liberi, itself 5 miles north of the Volturno, and a major battle may be developed there by a Nazi counter-attack, said a dispatch from the front.

As American and British troops swept across the fertile Mazzoni plain north of the Volturno they found not only the most dreadful devestation yet encountered in Southern Front operations, but many slain civilians as well.

Homes Fired, Stock Slaughtered

In addition to blowing up roads and railways and destroying everything that might be of value to the Allies, the Nazis fired farm houses and haystacks to provide smoke screens for their withdrawal and slaughtered all livestock, official reports from Fifth Army headquarters said.

The enemy is establishing a strong new system of defenses along a winding 27-mile line extending from Mondragone, 6 miles north of the Volturno River mouth, northeast to the mountain stronghold of Venafro. The new line runs along a series of high ridges intersected by deep valleys through which pass the two main highways from Naples to Rome.

By driving 5 miles north and northeast of Capua, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American troops left the Nazis no choice but to fall back to their new defenses. The advance carried the fighting Americans into the towns of Pignataro, 6 miles north of Capua; Roccaromana, 5 miles northwest of Liberi, and Dragoni, a highway junction 2½ miles northwest of Alvignano, which was seized the previous day. The villages of Formicola, Camigliano and San Potito also were taken.

Move to Revise Postwar Plan Due for Showdown Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate's bipartisan crusaders for a strong Senate foreign policy declaration yesterday completed a streamlined draft of their minimum specifications for peace in preparation for a showdown in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today.

Original demands of the group that the United Nations be made the basis of postwar world organization to avert war were revised to provide for inclusion of such other "free and sovereign nations as shall be duly admitted."

Unchanged were the two basic Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill demands that the resolution specifically vest power in an international organization to peacefully settle disputes, with the right to use military force if necessary to suppress aggression.

The "B-2 H-2" amendments to the Connally compromise faced almost certain defeat in the Foreign Relations Committee, but bipartisan sponsors have served notice they will demand separate roll calls on each demand when the resolution reaches the Senate floor.

The amendment was expected to pick up some additional strength on yesterday's change. Some Senators had complained that mention only of the United Nations appeared to restrict membership to the Allied powers.

The Connally compromise, apparently headed for committee ap-

Mihailovic Hints At Desire for Unity

Yugoslav Leader Answers Critics; Tito Smashes German Landing Attempt

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 20.—Gen. Draja Mihailovic, in his first public statement in months, replied to critics today with a declaration widely interpreted as meaning he was willing to suspend the long and bitter quarrel between his Yugoslav army and the Partisan forces of Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz.

The statement was issued by the Yugoslav government in Cairo, of which General Mihailovic is war minister, as Tito's Partisans announced they had smashed a German attempt to land on Yugoslavia's Dalmatian coast.

General Mihailovic, who has been accused by Tito's supporters of cooperating with the Germans, declared that his Yugoslav army had stood fast for two and a half years in its "struggle against the invaders" and contained an implied appeal for aid from the Allies.

"All I expect from the Allies is sufficient aid to enable us to accomplish definitely the most ardent wish of us all—to vanquish the common enemy," said the general.

No Direct Mention of Tito

Although his statement made no mention of Tito's guerillas, it was noted that he did declare "the unity of our country is being sealed by the common struggle against the hated conqueror." This was interpreted as meaning Mihailovic was ready to make peace with the Partisans.

Yugoslav officials in Cairo pictured Mihailovic as having maneuvered for months, though unheralded, through ambushes, skirmishes and sabotage of enemy communications to isolate enemy fores, including large numbers of Bulgarians.

With the main rail line between Belgrade and Sarajevo cut in several places, these officials said that Serbia and Bosnia virtually will be cut off from each other when snowfalls render most of the mountain passes impassable. These officials said that Mihailovic's units claim to hold the greater part of Montenegro.

The Partisan victory, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, consisted in smashing a German seaborne attempt to land troops on the Pelejesac Peninsula, which juts northwestward into the Adriatic between Split and Dubrovnik, and on the islands of Hvar and Mljet, which guard the approaches to these ports.

Mutiny Among Nazis Reported

Prolonged fightnig is continuing, however, between Travnik and Sarajevo, 50 miles to the southeast. Thus the Partisans remained in the vicinity of Zenica, the "Balkan Ruhr," which they previously held long enough to destroy an important Krupp plant.

The French radio at Algiers broadcast an Istanbul report tonight that mutiny had broken out among some German troops in the Balkans.

The statement of Gen. Mihailovic came one day after his aides in Cairo reported the first activity by his army in months—a drive against the Germans by 100,000 Yugoslav soldiers toward the great loop of the Danube.

Gen. Tito's Partisans have been reporting virtually all the fighting in Yugoslavia since the Allies landed in Sicily and Italy.

Two Steamers Sunk

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 20 (AP).—Two British destroyers intercepted two German-manned Italian steamers in the Adriatic Sea off the Dalmatian coast Saturday, captured one and sank the other, it was disclosed today.

The action took place near where the Yugoslavs reported they had repulsed a landing attempt.

bridgehead across the Dneiper and took several towns, and there was also bitter fighting north of Kiev and south of Gomel.

Berlin radio, finding new circumlocutions for "retreat" not only emphasized the seriousness of the Dnnieper Bend fighting but spoke ominously of strong Russian troop concentrations in the area of Leningrad, indicating "the possibility that the enemy might begin an offensive there in the near future."

Greatest Array of Tanks

The Germans admitted the Russians had thrown more tanks into the battle of the Dnieper Bend than have ever been seen before on the eastern front, and one Berlin report said Soviet artillery "is active here on a scale never known before."

The drive, which began October 15, is mounting to a crisis which will force German soldiers to muster all the morale and military courage they possess, a Stockholm report said.

A Berlin broadcast by Martin Hallens Leben, DNB military correspondent, said: "The purpose of the German command apparently is by evasive movements and counterthrusts and with as small losses as possible to hold a line where the transition from the autumn to the winter campaign will be easiest."

Bombers Drawn From West

The Moscow newspaper Pravda said the Germans were violently counterattacking, especially with tanks and bombers in the Dnieper elbow. Numerous Nazi bombers were said to have come from western Europe.

The Germans have fortified strongly the area west of the Dnieper for 12 to 15 miles, planning to hold this line at all costs, Pravda said.

Moscow dispatches said that if the Germans must rely upon a natural barrier and do not halt the Red army shortly, they may be thrown back to the Bug River, about 100 miles southwest of Krivoi Rog at its nearest point. All indications were the Nazis wanted to stand and fight, and from the fury of their counterattacks it appeared they sought even to regain territory.

Sforza to Assume Italian Party Leadership

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Count Carlo Sforza, anti-Fascist who recently returned to Italy after living for a number of years in the United States, will take over the leadership of the Italian "action party" tomorrow, Don Hollenbeck, NBC reporter, said tonight in a broadcast from Algiers.

"The action party," Hellenbeck said, is composed of "Socialist groups which have come out for a progressive Socialist republic in Italy."

Salween Still Bars Japs, Chinese Say

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Oct. 20.—The Chinese high command declared today that Japanese forces seeking to strike into southwestern China from Burma still had not forced the Salween River, but acknowledged that the enemy was driving north and south along the west bank.

Artillery duels raged across the Salween, and there was close-quarter fighting as the Japanese columns moved north and south. The Japanese split into two forces, the communique said, after they had been routed Saturday from their position opposite Luku, on the east bank.

An American announcement yesterday that United States planes had bombed Japanese troops at Luku Sunday indicated that the enemy had crossed the river, but the Chinese communiques still did not explain that attack.

The Japanese column hitting southward along the Salween has reached Lichaipah, the Chinese said, and the north column "is held south of Lusui by our troops."

(A Tokyo broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said 15,000 to 17,000 Chinese troops had been trapped on the west side of the Salween by the capture of Lichaipah, a river ferry point, and of Likung, while other forces closed in from the rear and from the mountains to take a point northwest of Lichaipah. Their annihilation is imminent, Tokyo added.

(Heavy air attacks continued upon Japanese positions in Burma, British and American communiques in New Delhi announced. United States Tenth Air Force, in apparent aid to the Chinese forces, blasted airfields and rail tracks yesterday and Monday.)

New Chinese Minister Sees No Civil War

Chungking, Oct. 20 (AP).—The Chinese National Government, speaking through its new Minister of Information, Liang Han-chao, voiced assurance today of the prospective settlement of a quarrel with Chinese Communists and declared there would be no civil war in China.

"I can assure you that no such thing as a clash is impending between the Kuomintang (National People's Party) and the Communists," Liang asserted at his first press conference in his new position.

LONGER SHOE WEAR

Thousands of times daily you put a foot down and slowly but surely your shoe soles grate away. Friction does it, does it to all shoes. But in John Ward "Mastershoes" this walk friction is minimized through a newly patented process which makes "Mastershoes" so fluently flexible that they actually seem to walk with you. Not only does this make them wear much longer, but it also conserves your energy, leaves you fresher at day's end. A few trial steps in "Mastershoes" will genuinely astonish you. Take them today, and put Wartime shoe worries behind you.

U. S. Faces Terrific Fight, War Strategists Warn

By the Associated Press

A grim and graphic accounting of the war since Pearl Harbor, presented to House Members by top-flight military leaders, left many convinced yesterday that a terrific struggle lies ahead and brought home demands for freer release of information to counteract public optimism.

The legislators assembled in the Congressional Library auditorium to hear off-the-record talks from Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of War Stimson and other military men, among them a private. J. R. Oden, who gave a personal experience account of the Sicilian landing in which he was wounded. Movies of fighting and other phases of the conflict were shown.

[The Army's first-hand account of actual war conditions on every fighting front will be repeated this afternoon in the Congressional Library auditorium for the benefit of the United States Senate. Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill told the Senate General Marshall and his selected Army witnesses had made such a "fine impression" on House members, that Senators had requested the off-the-record encore.—Editor's note.]

House members reported the military men supplied this information as part of the over-all picture:

1. Siberian bases—Even if Russia would permit the United Nations to build or use airports at Vladivostok, Japan has a half million men within a short distance, a consideration which would make their defense difficult.

2. German air arm—The Germans no longer accept battle with our fighter planes, not—as one member put it—that "they are scared or have given up"—but because they are saving their fighters for splitting bomber formations and tackling bombers, in some cases by head-on collisions.

3. The Pacific sky—Japan is building planes faster than we are destroying them.

4. Manpower—Japan's manpower problem has not yet become as serious as this country's. The island empire has not called all of its eligible draftees or young men between the ages of 17 and 20.

5. Over-all—Transportation of supplies remains one of the chief war problems, with big losses in landings and airplanes still a long way from supplanting ships.

Not only was there no attempt to refute statements made by the five globe-girdling Senators upon their return from an inspection of war fronts, one member said, but there was no reference to their report.

"Straight-from-the-shoulder" . . . "very convincing" . . . "highly informative" . . . "no fancy stuff, just straight talk"—these were some of the descriptions with which Congressmen tagged the background, first-hand story.

"General Marshall gave us the impression that we are in one hell of a war," said one member.

Representative Ellsworth (Republican) of Oregon summed up what seemed to be the sentiment of most when he said the program "debunked a lot of optimism."

From House Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat) of Massachusetts came the assertion that the House members were given a "keen insight" into the War Department's problems. He said he though the greater part of the information could and should be made public.

Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said, "It was a splendid, informative talk, and we got a lot of good out of it."

A reporter and editor himself before he was elected to Congress, Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma termed the War Department's account the "most realistic job of reporting done on the war." "They didn't pull any punches," he said, "they didn't try to sell us on anything."

Crowley Denies Lend-Lease Pays for Drinks, Cosmetics

By the Associated Press

Congress, beginning an investigation of lend-lease, received from Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley yesterday a flat denial that cosmetics, beer and champagne have been charged against this fund for aiding American allies.

"I need not tell you," he added in testimony to a Truman war investigating subcommittee, "how disastrous to the effective prosecution of a coalition war can such untrue and unsupported rumors be."

Several members of the Appropriations Committee sat with Senators Mead (Democrat) of New York, and Brewster (Republican) of Maine, of the Truman Committee at the hearing. Both groups have projected investigations of lend-lease operations and Mead said Crowley's statement would form the basis of a joint inquiry.

Crowley said that of $15,235,000,000 worth of goods transferred and services rendered to lend-lease countries, 51 per cent was "finished munitions," 21 per cent industrial products, including such things as machine tools and chemicals, and 14 per cent agricultural products. Repairs to ships largely accounted for the rest.

Crowley described lend-lease as "an investment of American money and materials in the saving of American lives and the lives of the soldiers of every nation needing weapons with which to fight the Axis."

"The lend-lease program is carried out only after full consultation with the guidance of our top military, navy, shipping and other experts," he continued.

Conceding that mistakes had been made, Crowley invited congressional suggestions for improvement.

4. Shaken nerves of husbands and wives due to the excitement caused by the war seem to swell the number of unsuccessful marriages.

5. Quick war marriages in Washington are resulting in many more annulment and divorce suits than ever seen before.

Hearing divorce cases at present are Justice Jennings Bailey, James M. Proctor and Daniel O'Donoghue.

national representation for citizens of the District," and added that "effective Home Rule should begin with representation in Congress."

The directors further said that the McCarran bill, without national representation, would not be representative and "would be fraught with evil." The McCarran bill would provide a commission of seven members, one elected from each of seven districts. They would appoint a city manager subject to approval by the Senate. The bill provides that citizens in the District would elect the commissioners. The proposal would eliminate the present commission form of government. The bill does not provide for a District Congressman.

Judge Vinson, who spoke over a national radio hook-up, said the "real threat to stabilization comes from sincere, earnest Americans who sincerely and earnestly support stabllization—for the other fellow."

He said the Banking and Currency Committee of the House of Representatives has reported out a bill "which would prohibit the use of Federal funds by any Government agency to subsidize the production or distribution of food or to hold down prices to the housewife."

Judge Vinson said the development of America "is due in no small part to the use of common resources" which he termed "subsidides." He said "land grants to railroads opened up the great West, the homestead laws allotted free land and they were subsidies."

"Subsidies or Federal aid," said Judge Vinson, "are as much a part of the American tradition as flapjacks or corn pone."

Reilly, one of several speakers, urged the merchants and business men to prepare to support the Fourth War Loan due in January. He warned that "unless volunteer subscriptions are forthcoming, the Government may make compulsory savings mandatory." He said 15 billions raised in the Third War Loan would be entirely spent in ninety days.

Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, and the District Commissioners were in attendance among others. Randolph introduced William R. Brown, a missionary in China for 32 years, who told of the hardships in that country, in appealing on behalf of the Community War Fund drive for $4,800,000 now on in the District.

A. G. Neal, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., chided the business men for not cooperating with the Government in its volunteer dim-out program that began September 15.

A resolution of appreciation was adopted honoring Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, who retired yesterday after 23 years' service.

Nylon—extremely light yet much more durable than other fibers—makes the sheerest hosiery—and the sturdiest aircraft tires. The first Goodyear nylon tires passed the severest Air Forces tests more than a year ago. Now they insure happy landings for many types of warplanes on the roughest front-line fields. Lighter in weight than other tires, and requiring less rubber, these tires are another example of Goodyear leadership in tire development.

Justice Dept. Called Into Brewster Quiz

erect for the Brewster employes in the armed services. The union asked that the fact that all the men belonged to Local 365 be put on the flag.

"I said 'Nuts,'" Riebel told the committee. "It was the company that was putting up the flag and the company would have to reemploy the men when they returned."

The third issue, one which drew close attention from the committee, concerned the selective-service deferments. Riebel testified that the head of the Selective Service System in the Long Island territory had called him into consultation regarding draft deferments.

He quoted Major Brady, Selective Service officer in charge, as saying that the local boards were "about nuts" at the way men were being deferred and then loafing and hanging out windows at the Brewster Long Island plant.

Riebel quoted Brady as saying that Brewster would not get another single draft deferment unless the management would guarantee the need for the men and furnish replacement schedules. An explanation that the union contract specifically gave that right to the union did not satisfy Selective Service officials, Riebel said.

When he took the matter up with De Lorenzo, Riebel asserted, the union leader said:

"You pick up that telephone and tell that Major Brady to mind his own God-damned business."

The fourth point at issue, which caused De Lorenzo to term him "an insincere pussyfooter," Riebel told the committee, concerned the matter of a guard who was also a member of the Coast Guard Reserve (temporary) at the Newark plant.

Claimed He was Threatened

The guard claimed that he had been threatened by union men with "going out feet first" if he did not stop reporting workers for smoking and similar infractions, Riebel said. He told the committee the guard claimed to have been beaten up, although it later appeared someone had only taken a "couple of pokes" at him. At any event, the matter resulted in Riebel's going to Washington to consult Navy officials. On his return, the witness said, he was told by De Lorenzo to "tell those admirals and commanders to go to hell. We'll abide by our contract."

Riebel is the first of management witnesses to be called. The committee during its first sessions heard Navy witnesses, and Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia said that De Lorenzo and other union officials would follow the management witnesses.

Riebel stoutly defended his own record as a production man while at Brewster. He said he had accepted the position as president with the definite understanding that a new contract with the union would shortly be in the hands of the War Labor Board, and that he would be free to concentrate on the job he knew—production.

He insisted that previous witnesses—all Navy men—had not differentiated between managements in talking of Brewster's lack of production.

During the Riebel management under Henry Kaiser, the witness asserted, production was from 20 per cent to 84 per cent higher than under any other previous management.

He said he had been forced to get a new purchasing agent after he discovered that the incumbent was paying from 10 to 15 per cent more than necessary for goods, and dealing only with certain companies. He fired a vice president, he said, because he was reported "drunk on the job," and finally changed the chief engineer because he was so slow on decisions that production was held up.

Riebel attempted to show the committee many of the actual production difficulties of the plant. He pointed out that overnight Brewster had jumped from a small concern employing 700 persons to one employing 21,000. He said that the Long Island City plant was not designed for airplane building, asserting parts had to be transported from the eighth floor to the basement.

An airplane, he said, is four times the size of the space in which the first five Corsair fighters were turned out for the Navy at the Long Island plant.

strongly reinforced all along the Eighth Army front.

In addition to wreaking vengeance upon the Italian farmers for their country's surrender to the Allies, the Germans in their retreat were sowing the Fifth Army's path with great numbers of mines and were fighting occasional artillery, mortar and machine-gun actions to cover their withdrawal.

If the Nazi conduct north of the Volturno is to become a regular practice in their retreat toward Rome, the Italian Peninsula will be left in a more ravaged state than after the passage of marauding hordes of Vandals and Visigoths through it centuries ago.

When columns of smoke first were observed behind the enemy lines two days ago it was believed the Germans might be burning their own supply dumps. In this, however, the Allies underestimated the thoroughness with which the Germans were devastating the country, for when Fifth Army troops reached these areas they found most of the smoke columns were coming from th eembrs of burnd homes, barns and other civilian buildings.

Surviving Italians of the area were found hiding in ditches, canals and woods, terrified by the last days of occupation by their former Axis partners.

The stubbornness with which the Germans clung on to the Volturno line and their apparent determination to make a fresh stand on Massico Ridge, which is scarcely 10 miles beyond it, offers little hope of a speedy Allied entry into Rome.

There may be many weeks more of costly fighting before the Eternal City is reached. Meantime, blows being struck behind the enemy's lines by the Allied Air Force offer the best hope of hastening land progress.

U.S. Bombers Rake Duren Plant, Airfield

in a raid also aimed at Flushing.

The Duren plant was described as turning out "nonferrous" metals, raising the possibility that the factory might be an important producer of lightweight metals used widely in aircraft.

Formidable Spitfire forces earlier in the day had scored a victory in a sweep over France, and later RAF Typhoon bombers and Typhoons attacked Woensdrecht in Holland and another enemy airdrome at St. Omer-Longuenesse in France. They knocked down three more Nazi fighter planes.

Two fighters were reported missing from these collateral operations.

The over-all toll of planes lost in the day's activities Lost by the enemy, 20; by the Allies, eight bombers and two fighters.

The American bomber formations, which struck at lunchtime, were protected by both American Thunderbolt and British Spitfire fighters as an answer to such Nazi fighter opposition as encountered over the important ball bearing plant at Schweinfurt, where 60 American bombers and 593 airmen were lost. Thunderbolts normally have been the exclusive support of U. S. Eighth Air Force heavy bomber operations.

The significance of the move to give the daylight bombers a better fighter screen was pointed up by an RAF commentator who said that the Germans had increased their fighter force by one-third sinct January, obviously with the intention of providing a better defense against heavy American and British assaults.

Regardless of losses, however, American air officials have made it clear that the American bombing effort is to be continued with growing intensity—even if it costs as much as one-fourth of a single flight provided important objectives can be destroyed.

More than 100 United States Navy and Air Force planes took part in the northern Solomons offensive Monday morning, during which enemy gun positions and dumps were blasted.

Mitchell medium bombers, striking in coordination with the Ramu Valley drive, strafed bridges and villages along a good road which the Japanese built with Chinese coolie labor from Madang past Bogadjim. The Aussies in the Ramu Valley last were reported only 20 miles from Bogadjim which is the main defense outpost for Madang.

The communique for the second straight day reported successful aerial action against troop-laden boats. This time it was a large barge filled with Japanese troops on a river in the Aroe Islands north of Australia. Long-range fighters sank it. Yesterday's communique disclosed the sinking of a troop-crowded transport near New Ireland.

The barge depot of Kakasa on Choiseul Island was bombed by an American patroling plane. North of Bougainville, four small Japanese ships were attacked at night by medium bombers in the vicinity of Buka.

proval, mentions neither the United Nations, specific organization of nations to settle disputes, or use of military force. It provides generally for the United States to join with free and sovereign nations "in the establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida was expected today to offer the revised B-2 H-2 plan as a complete substitute for the compromise. On the Senate floor, however, the bipartisan group plans to offer a separate amendment covering each point, and demand a vote on each.

Senate leaders, who fear defeat of the B-2 H-2 amendments will be unfavorably interpreted abroad, and who claim a two-thirds Senate vote for their own compromise, said they still hope to persuade the bipartisan group not to carry their fight to the Senate.

Wage Boost Recommended In Rail Crisis

A special presidential emergency board has recommended an 8 cents an hour wage boost for employes of the Pacific Electric Railway Co. of Los Angeles as a proposed solution for that part of the knotty railroad wage problem, it was learned yesterday.

Meanwhile, increasing talk of a possible national railroad strike if the Administration fails to change its present position on railroad wages was being heard in rail union circles.

President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, asserted in Cleveland that "wage stabilization is no longer morally or politically defensible," and added that he would not recommend acceptance of a 4 cent wage increase awarded the five operating brotherhoods last month by an emergency board.

Operating brotherhood representatives will begin meeting in Chicago tomorrow on the wage award, with its rejection regarded as probable.

Wage Demands Pressed Home

Representatives of the 15 nonoperating unions have been meeting in Washington on the establishment of a special emergency board to review their wage demands. A statement as to their plan of action is expected today. The nonoperating unions were awarded an 8 cents-an-hour wage increase by an emergency board, but Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson set it aside, recommending a procedure which would give better paid workers a smaller increase.

Members of the Labor War Board, informal "labor cabinet" headed by President Philip Murray of the CIO and President William Green of the AFL, are scheduled to meet with President Roosevelt today on wage questions.

Special Panel Studied Case

The recommendation of the special panel assigned the job of considering the Pacific Electric wage demands was not made public when it was presented to the President last week to give the War Labor Board a chance to finish consideration of the related wage demands of the Los Angeles Railway Co.

Instead, WLB postponed action on the Los Angeles Railway case to give the parties a chance to resume collective bargaining.

The Los Angeles group signed a contract providing for a 10 cents an hour wage increase after an earlier emergency board recommended a 13 cents an hour increase for the Pacific Electric group. WLB rejected the Los Angeles contract, and Vinson then trimmed the Pacific Electric award to 3 cents. Recently, WLB reviewed its action in the Los Angeles case, but rejected the contract again by a 7-to-5 vote. However, it was understood that sentiment for a 5 cents an hour boost was growing.

If Vinson accepts the 8-cent recommendation in the Pacific Electric case—which is regarded as likely—the way will be paved for WLB action ordering a 5-cent boost in Los Angeles railway wages. At present, Los Angeles workers are paid 3 cents an hour more than Pacific Electric workers.

Whitney declared the brotherhood's wage case "has been kicked around by Government stabilization functionaries since the hearing was concluded by the emergency board in mid-July. The railroad workers of this country have been trifled with in a manner that would outrage the dignity of intelligent Americans."

He declared the President, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and Stabilization Director Vinson have stabilized wages, "but Congress has shirked its duty to the stabilization program," adding:

"Wage stabilization is no longer morally or politically defensible. I imagine the executive branch of the Government has been stalling and delaying a showdown on this issue, hoping against hope that the Congress would awaken to its patriotic responsibilities and hold its end of the line against inflation."

Concerning the appointment of a second emergency board in the nonoperating case, the trainmen's president said: "This stalling and appointing of a second emergency board was demolished the Railway Labor Act, and made the processes and procedure thereunder for the settlement of wage disputes a farce."

Finest Precision Bombing

WHAT YANKS LEFT BEHIND—This picture illustrates what General Arnold has called the finest example of daylight precision bombing—the October 9 raid by bombers of the U. S. Leaders Vote To End Strike In Ala. Mines

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 20.—Local union officers and mine committeemen voted today to heed the plea of United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis and district UMW executives and "do everything possible" to get 20,000 idle Alabama coal miners back to their jobs.

James H. Terry, UMW international representative, said the "leaders of the local unions voted almost unanimously" for the back-to-work resolution. Terry asserted they would try to get many of the mines operating tomorrow.

This decision came as coal production dwindled almost to the vanishing point, with less than 2000 men in the mines tonight, and none in the captive shafts which supply fuel for iron and steel industries here.

[The War Labor Board will hold a public hearing at 10 a. m. today in the departmental auditorium, 13th st. and Constitution ave. nw., on the proposed contract between the United Mine Workers and Illinois coal operators providing for a $1.75 daily wage increase. Appalachian coal operators have contended that the agreement, if generally applied, would throw the industry into chaos.—Editor's Note.]

Terry and John J. Hanratty, also UMW interpational representative here, had appealed to the local officials to end the unauthorized walkout, which began last week when Secretary Ickes returned the mines to their owners.

Hanratty estimated more than 400 attended today's mass meeting. He told the delegates that continuation of the Alabama walkout might jeopardize the possibility of getting WLB approval of a new wage contract for the Illinois coal miners, due for hearing tomorrow at Washington.

Terry said "it may take a day or two" to get action by some of the mine locals.

Seven blast furnaces, producing 5000 tons of iron daily, and seven open-hearth furnaces, producing 3500 tons of steel ingots daily, already have been taken out of production in Alabama.

Sporadic walkouts occurred in Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky, where an estimated 3600 men were idle, mostly as a result of local differences.

Groups Urge Body to Plan Postwar Era

Immediate creation by Congress of an agency to steer the Nation's economy into the postwar period was urged yesterday in a joint statement issued by the agriculture, business and labor committees of the National Planning Association.

The planning organization proposed that Congress establish in the executive office of the President an "administrator of national reconversion." The administrator would be authorized to act in consultation with a "National Reconversion Commission" containing representatives from government, business, labor and agriculture.

Under the committees' proposal, formulation and administration of the general policies underlying termination of war contracts, disposal of surplus war goods and reconversion of war plants to peace would fall to the proposed agency.

Would Coordinate Activities

The agency would coordinate "the relevant work of other agencies, including those that may be created to handle special duties," and utilize "the facilities of existing agencies, such as the War Production Board."

The administrator and members of the commission should be appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the group suggested. Steps by executive order to get the program started were also recommended.

On instructions from President Roosevelt, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes has established a reconversion unit in the OWM to coordinate government activity on the subject.

Disposal of War Plants

The joint statement suggested that war plants which are found to be "superfluous or out-moded and not adaptable to the needs of peace" be dismantled and scrapped. Other plants may be retained by the Government for reasons of national security, while still others should be used to "provide the goods and services that a growing economy will require and should therefore be made available to private ownership and management as rapidly as is consistent with the public interest and in such a way as to encourage effective competition."

"Speed and fairness" were urged as two guides for the termination of war contracts. Continuation of Government control over materials into the postwar period to insure "fairness" was indorsed. Meanwhile, materials should be made available as rapidly as military necessity permits, the planning committees said.

The National Planning Association is headed by William L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production Board in charge of foreign requirements. Robert J. Watt, labor member of the War Labor Board, is vice chairman. Its executive committee approved the joint statement.

D. C. Dog Quarantine Urged to Prevent Rabies Spread

Medical Society; Dr. Irving Cashell, secretary of the District Veterinarian Society; Dr. V. L. Ellicott, health officer, Montgomery County; Dr. W. A. Browne, health officer, City of Alexandria, and Dr. John Byers, health officer of Prince Georges County.

Dr. James Cumming, the chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases, issued the orders to pick up the infected dog. He said the health Department learned the mad dog made a tour around the city, covering 10 miles before and after he attacked Mrs. Estelle Kirby, 63, of 20[illegible] st. nw., near the Shoreham Hotel.

"We know the dog bit at least three other dogs on his trip, and it is likely he bit a lot more," Dr. Cumming aerted. "Furthermore, we know that at least 60 to 80 per cent of these will develop rabies if they are not treated. The condition is a serious one."

A black and brown mongrel, the mad dog was captured in the 900 block 25th st. nw. by workers from the pound. He had bitten Mrs. Brown a short time before.

Poundmaster Arthur Marks ordered the dog killed in the gas chamber at the pound yesterday morning. Examination of the animal's brain by the Health Department revealed he was rabid.

The dog was identified at the pound yesterday by Mrs. Robert D. Conrad, 2800 Woodley rd. nw., as the one which attacked Mrs. Kirby. It was Mrs. Conrad who probably saved Mrs. Kirby's life when she drove off the mad dog with a rock.

It was learned yesterday that the dog also set upon the pure-bred terrier of Mrs. Arthur Alexander, 2813 35th st. nw. The terrier, Peter the Patriot, was bitten on the foot and head. He was under the care of a veterinarian last night.

Mrs. Kirby was reported in considerable pain last night, suffering more than 20 bite wounds.

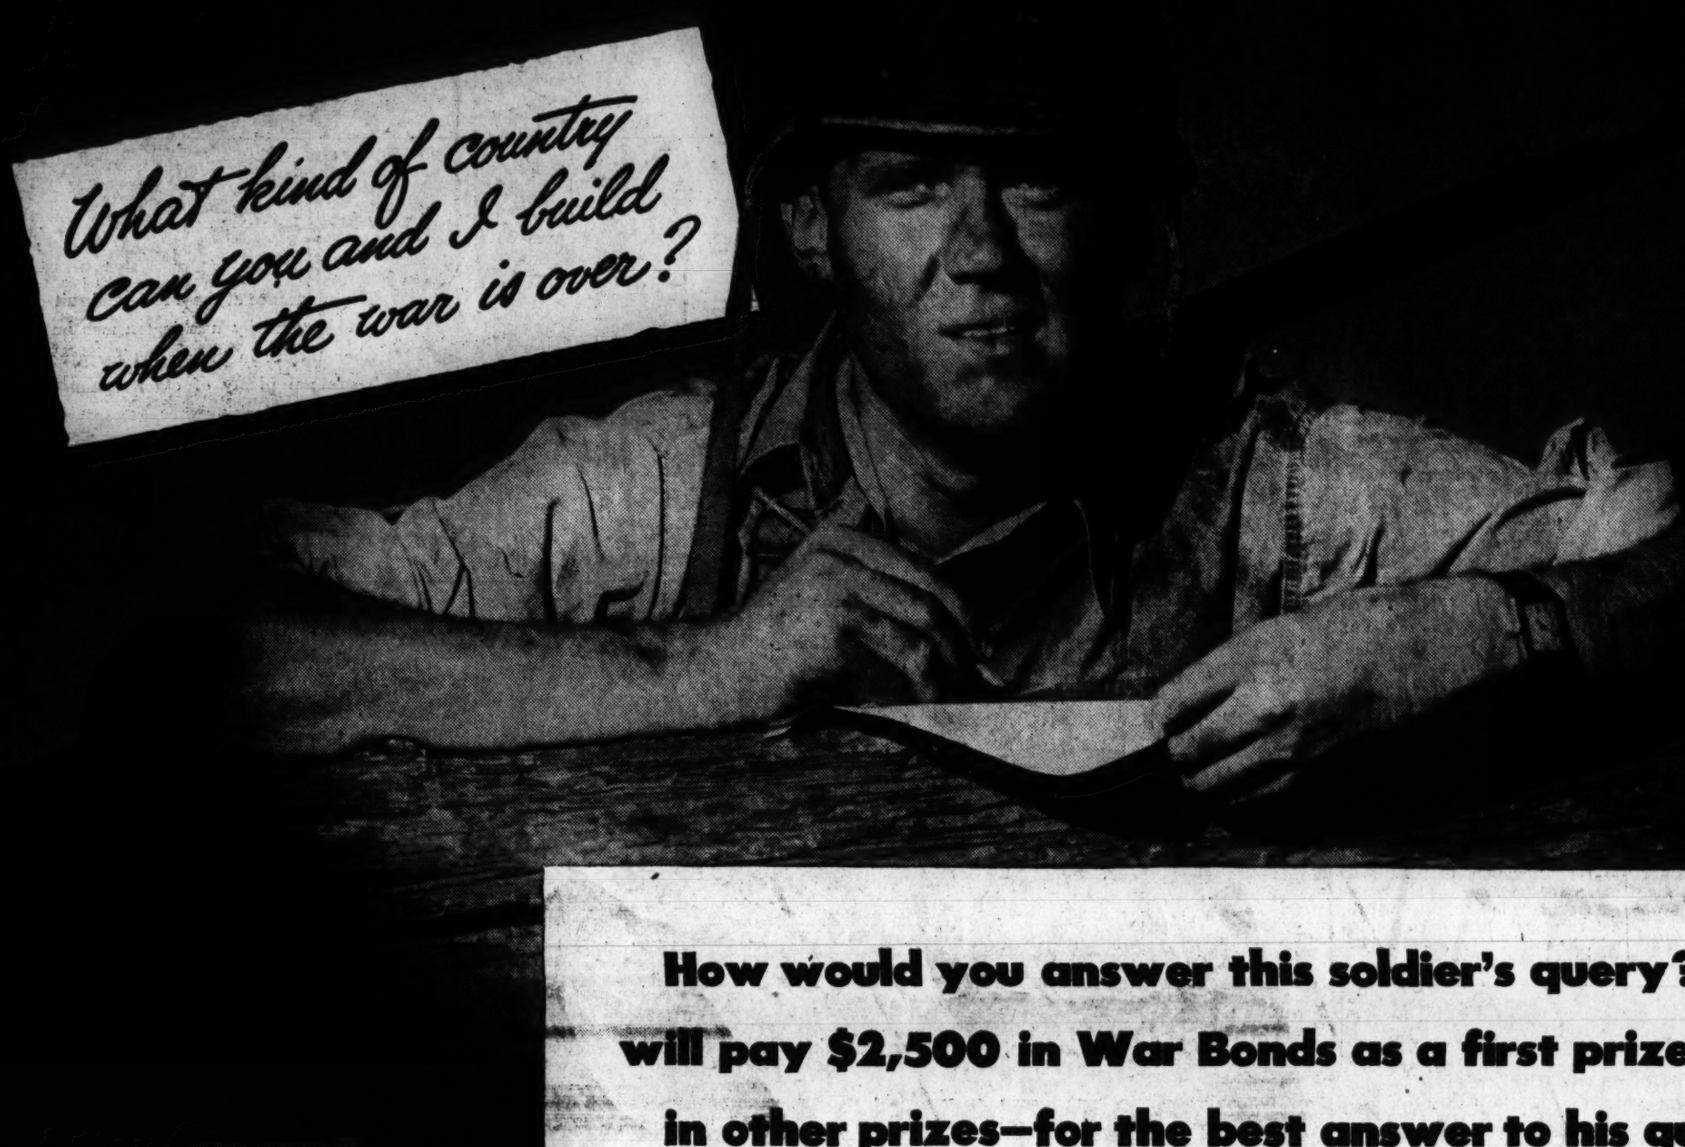
What He Wants to Know Is:



How would you answer this soldier's query? LOOK will pay $2,500 in War Bonds as a first prize—$2,500 in other prizes—for the best answer to his question.

Here's an American soldier, one among millions.

For the first time in his life, he is outside the borders of the country in which he was born.

He is meeting strange people—hearing strange talk—seeing firsthand the results of strange preachings.

He's clear on one thing: This war must be won—won quickly—won finally and conclusively.

Never again must brutal forces of aggression and cynical might be permitted to spread the oppression, the suffering, the destruction he has seen.

He realizes, too, that he and his fellow countrymen must have a hand in making sure of this. That this country can never again retire to its storm cellar and let the storms of war sweep the rest of the world—that no matter how much we might wish otherwise, we are henceforth bound to be affected by what affects the rest of the world.

But What about Home?

All the more reason, then, to be concerned about what is to happen at home.

How can we help maintain a peaceful, law-abiding, smooth-running, forward-moving, freedom-enjoying world unless we first prove that freedom works smoothly here at home?

So he wants to know what kind of country this can be made.

Is it going to be a place where he can go back to his job or business and pick up the broken threads of peaceful advancement once more?

Is he going to be rewarded for his part in winning freedom by an honest chance to build his own life, forge his own career, make the most of his own talents?

Our great productive capacities have swiftly and miraculously mastered the job of keeping him supplied with his military needs. Are they going to be fully free to produce the multiplicity of good things that make up the richer, fuller life that has always been America's goal?

What use will we make of the new materials, new processes, new methods the war has developed? How shall we best capitalize on the huge volume of pent-up buying power the war has built, and the tremendous world market for American goods that is expanded with every fresh introduction of American men and American wares to foreign lands?

What, if anything, is going to happen to our political system, our form of government? Will our returning warriors continue to live a sort of civilian GI existence under extended wartime regulations and controls, or can we clear the decks of all that?

What postwar approach shall we take toward business — finance — labor — racial problems? What prize or penalty shall we put on individual initiative, personal get-up-and-get, human enterprise and ambition? Do we need more laws or better laws, more government of the people or more government by the people, more organization of groups and "blocs" or greater respect for and teamwork among individuals?

What Do YOU Think?

Not all such matters can be covered in a single letter, naturally.

But such are the things to be considered for the future.

So what would you say if a fighting man of yours wrote home to ask what kind of country this could be made? What kind of letter would you write to make him see he's fighting for something worth while as well as against something that must be destroyed?

Write as You Think

No "fine writing" is needed to win in this contest. Beautiful phrases and slogans mean less than sound, honest thought, simply and plainly expressed.

LOOK wants your own ideas, your own words, your own honest picture of the coming America.

Start thinking about it now. Read the simple rules. Then sit down and write your answer to this soldier — right away.

RULES OF LOOK'S "LETTER TO A SOLDIER" CONTEST

1. Any American citizen, native-born or naturalized, may enter this contest except employes of LOOK and members of their immediate families.

2. All entries must consist of reply to the soldier's letter, in general answering the questions he raises.

3. Entries may be of any length up to 2,500 words, not counting salutation and signature.

4. Fancy presentation is barred. Only letters written legibly or typed neatly on plain paper will be considered.

5. Simple words and specific thoughts count most. Generalizations and vague phrases, no matter how impressive, hurt your chances.

6. Tricky new schemes for running the country and the world are not sought. First prize will go to the letter which, in the judges' opinion, most clearly and simply states the ideas of most Americans, as reflected in the entries.

7. LOOK reserves the right to publish any prize-winning entry, which becomes the property of LOOK Magazine on payment of the prize. LOOK also will pay, at regular editorial rates, for any entry it considers worth publication, even though it fails to win a prize.

8. Any contestant may make as many entries as he or she wishes, but only one entry by any one contestant will be considered for an award. This will be the entry which the judges regard as the best received from that contestant.

9. Don't worry about spelling, punctuation, etc. LOOK will not edit your entry or change its thought, but will correct any obvious misspelling or lapses in punctuation.

10. Entries from points within continental United States must be mailed no later than midnight December 15, 1943. From outlying possessions or occupied territory, entries must be mailed no later than midnight of December 31, 1943.

11. The decision of the judges will be final and all entries become the property of LOOK. In the event of a tie, prizes of equal value will be awarded. No entries will be returned.

12. PRIZES: Prizes will be awarded on a national basis without regard to regions. They will total $5,000 and this will be apportioned as follows:

Grand Prize . .	$2,500
Second Prize . .	500
Third Prize . .	300
Fourth Prize . .	200
Fifth to Nineteenth Prizes, inclusive	100 each

13. The editors of LOOK will act as judges. Names of winners will be published in LOOK and winners will be notified by mail.

14. Address letters to LOOK's Contest Editor, 511 Fifth Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

Chinese Entry Bill Passage Advocated

By the Associated Press

Establishment of postwar democracy in the Orient would be aided by passage of the bill to end 61 years of Chinese exclusion and permit 105 Chinese to enter the United States annually on a quta basis, Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington told the House yesterday.

Speaking during debate on his bill to relax the immigration ban and permit naturalization of those legally resident here, Magnuson said:

"We have talked a great deal in platitudes and generalities regarding our feelings toward our Allies and how the Allies are going to rebuild this world. This is the first time since the war began that we have an opportunity to do something concrete about it, and toward the most valiant ally of all."

Answering objections of opponents, Magnuson maintained that his amendment to the immigration laws would counteract Japanese propaganda based on exclusion of Orientals.

"War and Peace Measure"

Representative Gossett (Democrat) of Texas, who directed debate for the majority, had introduced a bill to reduce all immigration quotas 50 per cent for a period of 10 years, but he told the House the Magnuson bill was a "war measure and a peace measure" which had his wholehearted support.

"This bill," Gossett said, "is the simplest, most inexpensive investment in world peace that has yet been proposed to this Congress."

Declaring Congress should not attempt to deal piecemeal with immigration, Representative Bennett (Republican) of Michigan told the House the Magnuson bill did not give Chinese equal treatment with European nations.

By restricting Chinese immigration on the basis of race rather than nativity, Bennett said, the bill continued discrimination.

Terming the move an "empty gesture" which would not fool the Chinese, Bennett said it left in effect discrimination against Filipinos.

Representatime Elmer (Republican) of Missouri opposed the bill with an "America for Americans" plea, and told the House that on the basis of "Asia for the Asiatics" the Chinese themselves "could not restrain their happy feeling" when the English colonials "were taken from the 'Hill' in Hongkong and jailed."

"No nation has the right to boss, control and govern another nation or people," he said.

Representative Judd (Republican) of Minnesota declared that passage of the Magnuson bill would aid materially in counteracting disquiet among the Chinese caused, he said, by recent speeches of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

O'Neal Cites 'Wrong' Idea of Farm Income

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

When the President talks about the 12½-billion-dollar income of farmers this year—something he is expected to stress in his 30-page food message to Congress today—he is "using statistics to give a wrong impression," Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, charged yesterday.

"Only by showing the farmer's position in relation to the rest of the country can his true dollar position be presented," the farm leader declared as he continued his no-compromise battle for "fair food prices in the market places" and against food subsidies.

Farmers, representing 23 per cent of the population, have had an income increase of 7.2 billion dollars since 1939, O'Neal said, and today are receiving less than 10 per cent of the national income.

Non-Farm Income Up 66 Billion

Income to non-farmers has gone up 66.3 billion dollars in the same period, salaries and wages having advanced 20.7 per cent since "stabilization," he said.

Contrary to the usual impression, he declared, hourly earnings of factory workers have increased 8 per cent since "stabilization" and the retail food cost index is up by the same amount.

"If non-farm workers are to be subsidized so they can pay their grocery bills, let the subsidy payments go to them and not to the farmers. War itself is inflationary. If there is blame for it, it does not belong to the farmer who is asking only an equitable position."

Dairy Feed Needed

Meantime, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in a review of the dairy situation, declared: "If the subsidy to dairy producers is continued, milk production in 1944 may total 116 billion pounds." The War Food Administration had set a goal of 122 billion pounds for the year, but BAE reported production per cow decreased and also a decrease in the number of cows being milked.

The bureau warned that to meet the WFA goal several adjustments must be made to get dairy feed "into the hands of dairymen" and suggested the possibility of using soil conservation payments to promote pastures and hay land fertility programs.

BAE devoted several paragraphs to the subsidy program of the Canadian government, which increased its payments to milk producers this month "as part of a program to get increased quantities of feed grains moved from the West to the East."

'Yowsah' a Memory

Ben Bernie Loses Game Fight for Life

By the Associated Press

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 20.—Ben Bernie, who came up from poverty to help set a new style in radio entertainment and pick up a sizable fortune, died today.

BERNIE

The 52-year-old Bernie's ailing heart, further weakened by more than eight months of desperate illness, finally yielded at 8:50 a. m., removing from the entertainment world the band master whose cheerful "Yowsah, Yowsah" for years had echoed along the Nation's air lanes.

The determination which enabled Bernie to travel his many-obstacled pathway to success contributed largely to his death, said his brother-manager, Herman. Bernie was stricken with pleurisy in Chicago last February and despite his physician's exhortations to stay in bed, insisted on coming west to fulfill a series of engagements in war plants.

He suffered a relapse almost at once and for 11 weeks was able to leave an oxygen tent only at intervals.

D. C. Welcome Awaits Potato Harvesters

"Borrowed" farm workers credited with having helped save Maine's bumper potato crop will stop off in Washington on their way home this morning to be greeted by Congressmen from their States—Kentucky, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and West Virginia—and receive the thanks of the Maine delegation from Senator Ralph O. Brewster.

Among the 500 workers, the Office of War Information said last night when announcing the ceremony for 11 o'clock on the Capitol steps, will be Mrs. Alice Davis, 71-year-old widow from Lovely, Kentucky, who averaged 55 barrels daily during the potato harvest.

GOP Leaders Seek Adjournment in Belief Tax Bill Is Shelved

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Capitol Republican leaders, confident that Congress will not produce a tax bill this year, prepared yesterday to seek agreement for an informal adjournment program starting about November 15.

This plan, still tentative, was based on the view that the only remaining necessary piece of major legislation is the bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for 18 months, but banning consumer subsidies after December 31.

Leaders Confer

Senate Republican Leader McNary of Oregon was understood to have discussed with several members the possibility of seeking an outright formal adjournment the middle of next month or whenever Congress finished the CCC bill. He conferred, however, with House Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts and later indicated that the plan to be sought would probably call for three-day recesses of each House, under an agreement not to bring up any controversial legislation, starting November 15 or 20.

The adjournment talk developed as the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee prepared to start executive sessions today to draw up a tax bill in the wake of an ultimatum from the committee's Republican members declaring that further increases in Federal taxation at this time would threaten the future solvency of business and liquidate the middle class.

The Republican stand left Democratic leaders uncertain what could be done about raising new revenue—and obviously gave the Republicans the controlling voice in any effort to work out some compromise revenue-raising plan, possibly a sales tax.

House Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts observed that the Republican no-tax-increase program was "a strange position to take in time of war."

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas told his press conference that "I cannot see the wisdom of dropping the whole thing (the tax bill) until it has been explored thoroughly, and we see whether the imposition of additional taxes, which the Treasury says are vitally needed, will be too irksome for the people to bear."

He said the question of taxes was one about which "I wouldn't jump at conclusions."

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate's Finance Committee, indicated he had not given up expectation of seeing some kind of a tax bill.

He suggested that the Joint Tax Staff of the Capitol might submit proposals, on which they have been working, that would obtain majority support in the Ways and Means Committee and in the House.

"My judgment has been all the while that we could not substantially increase personal income and corporation taxes in view of the present situation," George added.

He said that the Treasury's reliance on income tax increases and corporate rate boosts for the bulk of its $10,500,000,000 revenue program was the thing that overthrew it, rather than the amount of revenue sought.

Senator George was asked about the effect of the Republican tax stand, on the plans of some members to attempt freezing Social Security levies at the present 1 per cent level, to prevent their increase, authorized by present law, to 2 per cent after January 1.

He replied that a bill providing only for the Social Security rate freeze "would run into a veto." He agreed, too, that a veto was likely for a bill seeking to couple the freeze with only minor revenue increases.

Reiterates Economy Plea

Completing its public tax hearings, the Ways and Means Committee heard Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, renew his appeal to substitute an economy program to net more than four billion dollars in the next fiscal year as a partial substitute for the Treasury tax program.

He told Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia he would support the latter's program for a 10 per cent retail sales tax if that came to the House floor. Of his own plan, Representative Robertson said, "it is pretty sick but it is still alive."

During the coming year, Taber added, "I intend to give the House an opportunity to vote down every expense not required for the war effort, and to do my best to call attention to every wasteful act which will delay the war effort."

Appropriations Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri told newspapermen the Republicans were playing politics.

"If we could hold the presidential election next week instead of next year, and get it out of the way," said Cannon, "then we could win this war a lot quicker and a lot cheaper."

It seems but yesterday that Union Pacific was transporting metals mined in our western states to industrial centers for use in automobiles, refrigerators and many other pre-war products.

Today those western metals are vital to the production of shells, guns, grenades and other elements of war. Then the completed products must be transported by train to ships bound for foreign shores.

The coordinated effort of American industry and transportation—including 50,000 Union Pacific employees—is a two-fisted fighting force with tremendous driving power. We'll keep 'em rolling to Victory!

Baptist Drive Draws 35,000 To Services

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Approximately 35,000 persons have attended special services in 30 Washington and nearby churches since the city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive began Sunday, the Rev. James P. Rodgers announced following last night's services.

Mr. Rodgers is chairman of the steering committee for the two-weeks' drive that is featuring visiting evangelists from 12 States speaking daily in churches and on the air.

Meanwhile, it was announced at yesterday's breakfast seminars at the YWCA, 614 E st. nw., that laymen and ministers of the cooperating churches would visit several thousand homes Sunday afternoon to reach throngs of newcomers in "boom town" Washington.

The Baptists' cooperative venture, first of its kind on the part of that faith here, was highly praised last night by Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Washington Federation of Churches' executive secretary, in a message to the Rev. Mr. Rogers.

Several tours have been arranged for the visiting ministers. They will visit Washington Cathedral this morning and the District Baptist Home for Children Saturday afternoon. Some of them will accompany legislators on a tour of the city's slums Saturday morning.

There is none of the "Billy" type of evangelism about the Baptist campaign here. The Rev. Luther J. Holcomb, pastor of Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church, explained that modern evangelism stresses more the appeal to the intelligence rather than to the emotions.

The Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor of Bethesda First Baptist Church, and among the campaign's most active supporters, was elected new president of the Montgomery County Ministerial Union on Monday.

This much has been learned about the first meetings—Molotov has kept his glasses on his desk.

W. Averell Harriman, new United States Ambassador, is serving as Hull's assistant, and William Strang, British assistant undersecretary for foreign affairs, likewise is attending the sessions.

The initial meetings yesterday were given over to setting the agenda for the conferences, a spokesman said, and he pointed out that there was "no challenge" to the agenda by any of the parties. Asked what it contained, a British spokesman said, "there are all sorts of problems to be discussed."

Standley to Address California Society

Admiral William H. Standley, who returned here recently from Moscow, where he was United States Ambassador, will speak at the California State Society meeting Monday at 6 p. m. at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw. Admiral Standley formerly was president of the society.

The Californians' traditional Sunday morning breakfasts have been abandoned, due to manpower difficulties at the hotels. Mrs. James G. Ingebretsen of 2119 Plymouth circle nw, is the new "breakfast" chairman and all reservations are to be made through her.

Father Draft Bill Reported to House

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday unanimously reported the fathers' draft bill, sharply revised from the form in which it passed the Senate, and specifically providing for induction of nonfathers on a national basis.

The full committee approved, with only minor changes, a revised version of the bill recommended Monday by the Costello subcommittee. One amendment requires Selective Service boards of appeal to make public their decisions.

Chairman Andrew J. May of the Military Affairs Committee said the bill probably will be called up in the House next Tuesday. Under the Kilday bill, principle of induction of all categories ahead of fathers on a national basis, approved by the committee, Selective Service will be required for the first time by law to exhaust the list of available nonfathers first, under such reasonable rules and regulations as they may advise.

The Potato Growers and Shippers of America are UNALTERABLY OPPOSED to a Government Subsidy on White Potatoes As Unnecessary, Unwise and Unfair

HONORABLE FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
President of the United States

HONORABLE JAMES F. BYRNES
Director of War Mobilization

HONORABLE FRED M. VINSON
Director of Economic Stabilization

HONORABLE MARVIN JONES
War Food Administrator

MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE

MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

OUR Federal Government, last Spring, urged an increased production of white potatoes, offering an incentive payment and a support price to the potato growers of America.

The result was a record crop which now must be so marketed as to insure that production of this vital war food will be adequate to meet the country's needs next year.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones, referring to the 1943 white potato crop, has said:

> "This is an achievement of which every American should be proud, for every bushel of these potatoes is needed to help meet the requirements of our fighting forces and our civilian population."

The industry at this time expresses its appreciation to the War Food Administration and its executives for their efforts and assistance in helping to move this crop into safe storage and consumption.

The Government's production goal was attained by the industry in spite of acute shortages of farm equipment, of fertilizer, of manpower and of farm wages higher than in any other year in the history of the potato industry.

The potato industry, represented by the growers and shippers of the States listed below, produced this bumper 1943 crop because our Government asked for it and because our country needed it. Now it must be marketed efficiently.

A program of support and ceiling prices has already been established by Government Agencies for the late potato producing States with which they will operate through their entire marketing season. We are confident that we can complete the harvesting and the marketing of the entire Fall crop if that program permits us to proceed without further interference.

We are unalterably opposed to any attempt by the Federal Government to impose upon the potato industry a subsidy and/or rollback program. In many instances, the very threat of a rollback of retail prices on potatoes through subsidy has already disrupted normal contract buying for immediate and future needs, resulting in many purchases below the support price.

We declare that under present O.P.A. ceiling prices the American consumer purchases potatoes at a very low cost on a basis of food values. Present consumer buying power assures our potato growers of a heavier-than-normal demand for their product, thus making unnecessary, unwise and unfair any rollback by subsidy or otherwise.

WE ASK ASSURANCES:

THAT, in the interest of production, proper consideration be given costs, including labor, when establishing the 1944 support and ceiling prices.

THAT, no further attempts be made to enforce subsidy and/or rollback.

THAT, all uncertainties be eliminated because of their effect on future white potato production.

It is vital to the plans of the American potato industry that some statement be made now by the Federal Government as to what may be expected.

FOR THESE REASONS WE HEREBY REQUEST THAT A COPY OF THIS RESOLUTION BE MAILED TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES AND THOSE HEREIN ADDRESSED, AS WELL AS TO OTHERS CONCERNED, AND THAT THIS RESOLUTION BE PUBLISHED IN ONE OF THE REGULAR DAILY PAPERS OF WASHINGTON, D. C. AND THE TRADE PRESS.

Witness Cites 'Theatrical' Talk Of De Marigny After Murder

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Oct. 20.—The trial of Alfred de Marigny reached a new dramatic pitch today during a determined defense effort to cast doubt on the testimony of key witness Harold G. Christie about the slaying last July of Sir Harry Oakes.

Hurling questions as though Christie himself were the defendant, Chief Counsel Godfrey Higgs drew two shouted replies in a cross-examination centered upon the witness' account of finding the aged millionaire's body when he went to awaken him for breakfast.

Then, while a capacity Bahamas Supreme Court room audience still was breathless from the bare-fisted exchange, the prosecution brought forth a witness who said that De Marigny, Oakes' accused son-in-law, acted "theatrical" when the crime became known.

Neatly dressed, and again wearing a tie bought for him by his wife Nancy, Sir Harry's eldest daughter, De Marigny propped one foot on a bench in the barred prisoner's dock and wrapped his arms about his knee as he drank in every word of the cross-examination.

Christie, real estate dealer and long time friend of Oakes, had told yesterday in a calm, clear voice of spending the night of July 7-8 at Westbourne, the Oakes estate, and getting a terrific shock the next morning when he sought to awaken Sir Harry and found that he had been slugged and set afire.

He shouted for the first time when Higgs, after a series of questions designed to shake his story, pointed to a photograph of the body and suggested that Christie's efforts to revive Oakes were made even though Sir Harry obviously was dead.

"You didn't have much hope of saving Harry's life?" Higgs demanded.

"Yes," came the reply, "I had hopes of saving my best friend's life."

Again he raised his voice when Higgs, asking detailed questions, wanted to know which end of a towel he wet to wipe off Sir Harry's face.

"For heaven's sake, Mr. Higgs," Christie blurted. "I don't know."

Higgs asked why Christie, if he had stayed in Westbourne all night as he testified, had gone back to his bedroom to see whether it was afire once he discovered the blaze in Sir Harry's room.

"You were in the house all night?" the white-wigged counsel demanded.

"Yes."

"But you went back to the room you slept in to see if there was fire in it?"

"That was the natural thing to do."

Next to testify was Mrs. Newell Kelly, wife of the manager of Sir Harry's extensive Nassau enterprises and the second person to see Oakes' body. She broke her leg while attending Oakes' funeral in the United States, and told her story from a chair near the bench after limping into the courtroom with the help of her husband.

Returning from Westbourne to her nearby cottage, she related, she was met there by De Marigny and J. H. Anderson, manager of the Bahamas General Trust Co.

"De Marigny said 'This is terrible. Terrible,'" Mrs. Kelly declared. "He leaned against the porch and said 'I think I am going to be sick.' Both men came into the cottage. De Marigny asked for water, and Anderson for a telephone.

"De Marigny impressed me as theatrical. To get away from him I followed Anderson to the bedroom where he was telephoning. De Marigny came to the room and said again that he thought he was going to be sick.

"I told him to take hold of himself."

Mrs. Kelly was asked by Associate Defense Counsel W. E. A. Callender whether De Marigny left her cottage and walked alone to Westbourne. "I don't know," she replied.

"He may have gone during the 15 minutes you were with Anderson at the telephone?" Callender continued.

"Yes," was the reply. "He could have."

A fingerprint identified by prosecution witnesses as an impression of De Marigny's little right finger was found on a screen in the death room.

Prosecution witnesses have said De Marigny declared that he had not entered Westbourne for months until he learned of the crime, and have testified that the defendant had no opportunity to touch the screen afterward.

Callender's questions formed the defense's first move to show that De Marigny might have entered the death room in the excitement which followed the discovery.

Dr. H. A. Quackenbush estimated that Sir Harry had been dead from two and one-half to five hours when he made an examination after being summoned by Mrs. Kelly at 7:30 a. m.

He told of finding a burning spot on the mattress under the body and extinguishing it with a glass of water.

Mrs. Dulcibel Effie Heneage and Charles Hubbard, dinner guests at Westbourne July 7, both said Sir Harry was in high spirits

Air Force Parity Hailed By McCarran

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, advocate of a separate air force, yesterday hailed the action of the War Department in placing the air forces on a parity with ground forces as a "development of major significance in our national policy," but cautioned that it still fell short of the final goal of a separate air department.

The War Department policy was written into a field manual declaring land power and air power to be "coequal and interdependent," with neither being an "auxiliary of the other."

McCarran, in a statement, said the announcement "makes it clear at last why we have recently been winning battles on all fronts through achievement and maintenance of air superiority."

More Than a Victory

"This announcement is far more than a victory for those of us who have for so long been urging creation of a separate air force," he said. "It presages new victories and continued victories in the present war, and it is a landmark as well in the development of aviation and in the advancement of military science in this country.

"Doubtless, this is not the final step; that will come when we have a separate department for air on an equal footing with the War and Navy Departments.

"But this is a tremendous step forward.

Committed to Recognition

"It is a step which commits our military leaders to a recognition of the proper place of air power in warfare, as an autonomous arm."

McCarran cited correspondence he had with President Roosevelt last August on the separate air force proposal. The Senator called for prompt action to set up the unified, coordinated, autonomous air force "with which we must win the war."

The President replied that the Army and Navy air forces already had a strong voice in shapping military policy, that he was constantly thinking of further reorganizational steps to improve the military machine, but that a drastic change in the military and naval organization during the war might delay victory.

McCarran suggested yesterday that if the war makes it necessary to defer establishment of a separate air department, "we can now await that final step with full confidence that it must and will be taken."

He said the War Department action foreshadowed a world "in which air power shall have its rightful place as the arbiter of national destinies and this country shall have its rightful place as the greatest air power on earth."

Britain Ready With Extensive Postwar Air Program

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 20.—Lord Beaverbrook disclosed today that Britain has an "extensive and complete" plan for postwar civil aviation ready to present to an international conference.

The publisher, recently appointed Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Lords this plan was adopted at a recent empire air conference in London and awaited only the approval of the dominion governments.

Beaverbrook has been entrusted by Prime Minister Churchill with the direction of Britain's air transport policy.

He envisaged forces of 2000 planes engaged in civil aviation in Britain after the war. He remarked, however, that this estimate—which would be four times the number of commercial planes used in the United States before the war—"will not afford a great basis for production of aircraft after the war."

Beaverbrook said the Empire Air Conference, which was held in secret, "reached unanimous agreement on every issue." Submission of the empire plan to an international conference, he said, "must wait on the United States of America and particularly upon Russia."

The empire conference decided, he said, that "an international air transport authority should be intimately associated with and responsible to any United Nations security organization which might be established."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE PRESENT FIGHT over whether the Senate shall pass a milk-and-water resolution committing the country to dipping its toe vaguely into foreign cooperation for world peace, or shall come out with a bold, unabashed statement that we are willing to use a police force if necessary to prevent war, is the most important Senate debate in twenty years.

It rivals the historic battle between Woodrow Wilson and the little band of "willful" Senators which defeated the League of Nations. The entire world is watching it.

On one side is a younger group of Senators, most of them veterans of the last war, a mixture of both Republicans and Democrats who may differ on domestic matters, but are firmly united, regardless of party lines, that there must be no more war.

On the other side are older men, some of them still living in the days of pre-1914 isolation. There is Hiram Johnson of California, who helped defeat Woodrow Wilson and who, shaking his white head bitterly, told the Senate:

"I am going to die. But I am going to die fighting Joe Stalin."

Then there are such unreconstructed isolationists as Wheeler of Montana and Nye of North Dakota, plus Vandenburg of Michigan, who still wants to be an isolationist though terribly worried over the nonisolationist position of both Michigan business and Michigan labor. Finally, there are honest conservatives like George of Georgia and Conally of Texas, all older men whose international background got firmly fixed in the halcyon days before 1914.

The philosophy of the young "cooperationists" boils down to this: It is much better to have the battle over United States cooperation for peace now, before the war is over, than after the armistice. They remember the bitter disappointment, the setback to world peace after the last war.

Ball Starts Ball Rolling

IT WAS Senator Joe Ball, Republican of Minnesota, who started the ball rolling. Last week he invited 10 Senators to his office, pointed to the vague innocuousness of the Senate resolution on world cooperation which oldsters were sending to the Senate floor.

Senator Pepper of Florida immediately said he considered the "oldster" resolution a clever dodge by the isolationists. Hill of Alabama, Maybank of South Carolina, Bridges of New Hampshire, Hatch of New Mexico, Ferguson of Michigan, plus several others, agreed. Next morning six of them met again in Ball's office, drafted a new resolution authorizing a police force, the suppression of military aggression, putting teeth into the means for keeping world peace.

Senate oldsters and isolationists boiled with rage, called the young cooperationists a "little group of willful men." The youngsters accepted the challenge said they would rather be willful for permanent peace machinery now than let willful oldsters block peace machinery after the war.

Empty Embassy

ARGENTINA'S new Ambassador, Adrian Escobar, will have a barren welcome when he arrives at the Argentine Embassy in Washington. There will be no pictures on the wall, no rugs on the floor, and no beds to sleep in.

Escobar, newly appointed Ambassador to succeed pro-American Dr. Felipe A. Espil, doesn't know this, and probably won't learn it until he arrives to take over the embassy and to woo American favor, which has grown so cold ward Argentina.

The embassy is being denuded by Ambassador Espil by the simple process of removing his own belongings. The building belongs to the Argentine government—but this is about all. Over the period of his 12 years as Ambassador, Dr. Espil and his charming American wife have accumulated a rare collection of household goods, which have made the embassy one of the finest residences in town.

But when Espil, a devoted friend of this country, learned he was to be recalled, he ordered his stuff stored until he knew what his next post would be.

Thus when Escobar arrives, he will find little to greet him except the bust of San Martin, historic Argentine hero, in the front hall.

Russia Edges Balkans

SOMETHING has happened regarding those two-fisted Yugoslavs, and the question of Allied recognition.

Two weeks ago, a spokesman of the War Department said that Allied gun-running up the Adriatic to guerillas in Yugoslavia would be in favor of the "Patriot" forces of Mikhailovitch, since he was the British-recognized leader of Yugoslav forces, and the Minister of War in the cabinet of the government-in-exile.

But today, the chief fighting is being done by the Russian-supported "Partisan" forces of "Drug Tito." An Associated Press staff writer, Daniel De Luce, was sent to the headquarters of the Partisans to cover the war, and Partisans headquarters have been set up in London as well.

Tito is a Croat who volunteered with the Spanish Loyalists and distinguished himself in the battle of Barcelona. Later he studied in Russia, presumably in the Comintern School. When the Germans attacked Yugoslavia, he organized the Partisans, and later offered to put his forces under the command of Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, but the latter refused.

Whether it is the military feats of the Tito forces, or the political pressure of Moscow which has caused the switch, it is apparent that the Communist-led forces are now getting recognition. The British are still clinging to young King Peter, but there are many straws in the wind that the pro-Russian Yugoslavs will never let a King come back to the throne and that Russia will dominate the "Southern Slavs" of the Balkans.

Merry-Go-Round

SENATORS are giving credit to fearless Senator Ralph Brewster of Maine for his nonpolitical expose of fellow Republican Lodge's political partsanship in regard to Siberian bases. . . . It was significant that Kentucky's Happy Chandler, alleged Democrat, sat beside Republican leader Charley McNary during his criticism of the Administration's Southwest Pacific strategy. . . . John H. Perry, the Florida publisher, is reported heading a movement to "Permit Lupescu to Enter the U. S. A." with her royal husband. . . . Almost every American who has visited Mexico pays tribute to the quiet, patriotic manner in which both King Carol and his now wife are conducting themselves. Anti-Nazi Carol has given up any idea of returning to his throne, but is doing his best from the sidelines to promote trouble for the Nazis inside Rumania. . . . One of the toughest, most thankless jobs in the Army is that performed by the boys still marooned in Iceland. Taken there even before Pearl Harbor, they have little leave, little recreation, lots of fog. . . . Senators on the Judiciary Committee who oppose the poll tax bill are: Democrats, Hatch of New Mexico, Connally of Texas, O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Chandler of Kentucky, Andrews of Florida, and Wheeler of Montana; Republicans, Austin of Vermont, Revercomb of West Virginia.

McNutt Extends 48-Hour Week to Relieve Labor Crisis in 31 Critical Areas

By Watson Fenimore
International News Service Staff Writer

Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission yesterday ordered the 48-hour week extended to 31 critical labor areas.

McNutt also set up procedures to encourage adoption of the longer work week in 93 other areas where an acute shortage is expected within six months.

Washington, D. C., is one of 40 critical labor-shortage areas where the 48-hour week order has been in effect. The extended work week also is in effect in 19 out of 112 areas where the labor supply is "tight" but not yet acute.

In the areas of acute shortage—classified in Group I by WMC—the longer work week must be applied by November 15, McNutt ordered.

In the "tight, but not acute" areas—classified in Group II— extension of the work week will be decided by WMC regional directors in consultation with regional labor-management committees. If the regional director does not place the area under the 48-hour week order, he must send an explanation of his decision to Washington. No explanation is needed, if the longer work week is to be put into effect.

It is expected that the longer work week will be in effect in well over 100 cities before the end of the year.

McNutt explained that current labor market conditions now "require the fullest exploitation of every measure which the WMC can use to reduce the labor demands and obtain more effective utilization of labor."

The longer work week is one measure which has not been fully used in an effort to combat shortages of workers, the WMC chief added.

"Chief value of the application the longer work week," McNutt said, "is the cutting down of the demand for new labor and for replacements.

"In the areas where acute labor shortages have not actually developed, there will also be the value of releasing workers for employment in areas where labor conditions are even worse.

"Field reports to Washington indicate that in areas and industries where the longer work week has been put into effect, the results have been helpful."

Thank you...

...for giving up needless travel!

THOUSANDS of Americans, conscious of the vital part that transportation plays in victory, are giving up non-essential trips. That is genuine sacrifice, self-restriction symbolic of American determination to win this war.

Half the available Pullman cars and a third of all coaches are now in troop service. Those which are left are carrying an enormous volume of essential war and business travelers. Besides that, many thousands of service men on furlough and people going about the daily business of making a living are taxing available equipment to the limit. That kind of travel MUST come first.

With good grace there is almost universal acceptance of the fact that when no Pullman space is available the alternative is a coach; and when coaches are filled, the alternative to standing is to remain at home. For frankly, there is not room at all times for all who would like to travel.

Compulsory travel restrictions would restrain the few who consider personal convenience first, but by and large, plain horse sense and loyalty are making self-restriction work reasonably well.

Americans in the vast majority who ask themselves conscientiously, "Is this trip necessary?" will not undertake any unessential journey at the expense of crowding out an essential traveler or a service man on leave for a few precious days at home.

To those who have refrained from "pleasure" travel in the interest of their fellow-Americans and the war effort, the Pennsylvania Railroad acknowledges its appreciation. We know that in many cases it has not been easy, because it is human nature for Americans to "go places." But it is this spirit of cooperation that will help win this war.

Frank W. Ballou

The satisfaction of work well done is one of the rewards of retirement. But when to this satisfaction is added the acclaim of old associates, then there is an earnest of a serene and mellow eventide of life. This is assured for Dr. Frank W. Ballou, for 23 years our superintendent of schools. On medical advice he retires today, leaving behind a body of work which endures in stone and equipment and curriculum. It was due to Dr. Ballou that the District has a school system which is the envy of many American cities. As much cannot be said for other municipal enterprises in this voteless community. But Dr. Ballou combined in himself qualities which overcame all the singular obstacles which in the District inhibit civic improvement. Primarily there was his energy. It was guided by a talent for planning and a gift for administration. Then Dr. Ballou is an acknowledged expert in education. Add to these qualifications a knack for pleading the cause of District education and you have all the elements that make for leadership. With such a man our school system could not help but be what it is today.

The school system, however, is not his only memorial. An educationist looks for his work not in anything static but in the heaven of citizenry which he has cultivated. For this Dr. Ballou will have to look far afield. For the boys (and girls) who have gone through our District schools are now scattered over the earth's surface. He may well be proud of them, as they are of him. Today they cannot express their sense of obligation to Dr. Ballou. But in their place the four thousand men and women who teach our young are testifying to the will and devotion of their superintendent. As an example of teaching standards he will live long in their esteem. Coming to Washington as an experiment, for he was the first out-of-towner to fill the position, he leaves the superintendency as an institution. The Board of Education shares this high opinion of the superintendent. To make reasonably sure of perpetuating what a teacher calls the "Ballou spirit," the board has appointed as his successor the first assistant superintendent, Mr. Robert L. Haycock. The high standards which he will inherit from Dr. Ballou should be safe in Mr. Haycock's care. We join with the school system in wishing for Dr. Ballou that ease with dignity which Cicero regarded as the due of a good and fruitful life.

Death Of A Spy

The death in Shanghai not long ago of Ignatz Trebitsch-Lincoln closed a most extraordinary life in which what may or may not have been a genuine spiritual pilgrimage was combined with a most fantastic web of political intrigue, espionage and treason. Ignatz Trebitsch was a Hungarian Jew who became by turns a Lutheran divinity student, a Presbyterian missionary to the Canadian Indians, an Anglican vicar and a Buddhist monk. Somewhere along the line he adopted the name of the great American President for whom he professed a great homage.

It was during his Anglican interlude that Trebitsch-Lincoln got himself elected to the British Parliament through the influence of Seebohn Rountree, the cocoa magnate, whom he repaid by defrauding. According to his own admission, and the subsequent accusations of the British government, he was all this time serving as a secret agent for the German imperial government. When all this was found out, he fled to the United States, and later to Germany, where he became one of the moving spirits of the abortive Kapp putsch in the early days of the Weimar Republic. After his expulsion from Germany, he went to Paris to enter the pay of the French Foreign Office, but secretly joined the Austro-Hungarian monarchist conspiracy which was aiming to restore the Habsburgs. Having thus put himself into the confidence of the Habsburg conspirators, he immediately offered to sell their confidences to the Quai d'Orsay, but evidently his price was too high, for he subsequently sold them to the Czechoslovak Republic.

By this time he had, not unnaturally, made himself somewhat unwelcome everywhere in Europe. He returned to the United States, only to be promptly deported. It was about this time that the British, who had no doubt wanted very earnestly to hang Trebitsch-Lincoln himself, hanged his son, who had been duly convicted of a murder. Up to this time Trebitsch-Lincoln seems to have been a pure adventurer. But the execution of his son seems to have given him the one genuine passion of his life—vengeance upon his son's executioners. He went to the Orient, became an adviser to the War Lord, Wu Pei-fu, and later a hanger on at the court of the puppet Emperor Pu Yi of Manchuria. Presently he was back in China in the habit of a Buddhist monk, and a little later on returned to Europe and America, ostensibly seeking converts for his new faith, but probably his main job was to further the aims of the Japanese imperialists.

There was probably a great deal more to his history than this, but this much has been pretty well documented. Exactly how big a part he played in all the international intrigues which paved the way to Pearl Harbor, there is now no way of knowing. But his was certainly a fantastic career, and it is doubtful if anything like it could have occurred in any age less fantastic than our own.

Basis For Economy

The Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee have decided to oppose any further increase in taxes till there has been a thoroughgoing retrenchment in Government expenses. We feel that the problem cannot be so easily disposed of. However, the Republicans have a case for Government economy which can no longer be shirked. It may be asked what they mean by Government economy in wartime? Not primarily, of course, a slash in the cost of operating the Federal establishment. What the Republicans have in mind is a drastic cut in the budget for war supplies which is now running as high as 95 per cent of Federal outlay.

In this campaign they have a fertile field for their endeavors. Evidence of waste and worse in war contracts had been offered only the previous day by Comptroller General Warren. The Comptroller General cited case after case of outrageous expenditures. In the demand that this extravagance should be ended, there is no disposition to object to the volume of war orders. The output, huge as it is, cannot be questioned, and, indeed, should be increased. The point is that we could get that output, and more besides, for less money. Prudence in war spending has become the due of taxpayers who already are groaning under an oppressive burden.

Certainly profligacy of the kind reported by the Comptroller General is not calculated to promote a new tax law. His instances all had to do with the padding of costs by war contractors. Duplicate charges, lavish entertainment, wages that could not possibly have been paid out, extras in such forms as false teeth for employes, community fund contributions, juke boxes, greetings, and so on—these are the kind of items cited by Mr. Warren. As liens on the public treasury they are utterly unjustifiable. How much waste is involved in this business is only hinted at in the Warren testimony. His cases refer only to cost-plus contracts which the Comptroller General, under law, must audit. But by far the bulk of the war contracts are negotiated on a fixed-price or lump-sum system. These are subjected only to postaudit. So long as the money is accounted for, the Comptroller General is not empowered to check on the details of such contracts. It must be obvious, in the light of what is alleged to have happened in the cost-plus contracts. that the extravagance in the lump-sum contracts may be even worse. For in these cases the Comptroller General does not act as a check.

Who is responsible for this frittering away of the public money? Of course, the contracting officers of the War Department. In their behalf it must be said that at the start of the contracting stage the need was haste and the experience nil. But three years of experience have been accumulated. Haste, to be sure, is still necessary. But the very existence of padded costs has become a deterrent to production, since they make for bottlenecks. For instance, padded costs are caused by wasteful management, hoarded or half-used labor, and piled-up inventories. That makes for shortages at a time when all our resources and more could be employed in meeting war demands. Accordingly the charges should be investigated, and, if they are found true, a change in procurement practice should be demanded. And it is the Ways and Means Committee that should insist upon it. Nobody knows how much money could be saved by the introduction of real cost accounting, but there are those who feel that a fifth of our outlay could be conserved.

None of these extravagances, probably, can be recovered out of contracts already negotiated, amounting to 200 billion dollars. For the renegotiation process is based upon over-all profits, not on the expense incurred in filling contracts. But another 200 billions remain unallocated out of appropriations to the War Department made by Congress. If a fifth of that could be lopped off, what a saving might be effected! Certainly it would go far to help in the solution of the problem that the Treasury has posed for the Ways and Means Committee.

German Morale

The reported conference between Herr Hitler and Field Marshal von Keitel concerning the further conduct of the war is accompanied by a fresh wave of reports concerning the extent of defeatism among German civilians. One story from Bern, giving as its authority an item in the Berliner Boersen-Zeitung, tells of the execution of four members of the staff of the Horst Wessel Association in Berlin who were caught surreptitiously circulating a "defeatist poem." If such things occur, as in this case, within the Nazi organization itself, what are we to think of the present state of morale among the non-Nazi elements of the population? Perhaps we can find an indication in the special warning said to have been issued to those Austrians who have refused "the needs of the present hour" that they will pay for this refusal with their lives.

It is to Austria, of course, that one would logically look for the first signs of general disaffection. But that disaffection and the conviction of defeat might exist throughout the entire Reich seems pretty plainly indicated in the order prohibiting under pain of drastic punishment any public discussion of military or political questions. One has only to compute the size of the police force that would be required to detect and punish violations of this Draconian order to perceive that only a government pushed to the point of desperation would have promulgated it.

Still another symptom of the internal psychological state of Germany may be found in the current theme of domestic propaganda. The Germans are constantly being warned that peace is not even to be hoped for, because again and again the Fuehrer has attempted to make peace, and again and again has been rebuffed. It is not at all probable that any government would offer such excuses to any but a thoroughly war-sick people.

Future Of Fascism

The celebrated Italian philosopher, Benedetto Croce, in the course of another interview with the enterprising Mr. Herbert L. Matthews of the New York Times, made two observations that strike us as extraordinarily apposite. First, the Italian people, having suffered from the terrible disease of fascism, and having been cured of it after such anguish, are probably immunized against further infection. Second, other nations, even those which now hold fascism in greatest abhorrence, cannot be sure of any such immunity. Signor Croce believes that fascism as a political principle will not end with the war and he seems to think that this is not yet fully realized in the United States.

On this point we fully agree with Signor Croce. When the war is over fascism as a label will be dead, as dead for example as "Jacobinism" after 1814. But fascism as a political conception will go marching on, and under a new set of labels and catchwords; it may easily go marching on to further triumphs and further disaster and destruction. The danger in the United States lies in the frequently remarked inability of Americans to distinguish between words and phrases and their referrents, a consequence perhaps of the modern tendency in American education to emphasize the practical as against the critical virtues. Thus it has been possible to further a good many undemocratic causes in the magic name of democracy and to abrogate or restrict liberties in the sacred name of freedom. The Italians, said Signor Croce, "were so used to liberty that they were not sufficiently on guard when it was being taken away from them." In this connection it is pertinent to recall the cynical prophecy of the late Huey Long that "when fascism comes in the United States it will be called 'antifascism.'"

The reason why fascism will not perish at the end of the war is that it is not a new political phenomenon but a very ancient one. It is the phenomenon wonderfully described by Plato in, if we remember correctly, the eighth book of The Republic. It occurs after democracy has degenerated into demagogy and the demagogue is attempting to assume the status of dictator or tyrant. The attraction of fascism for the uncritical mind lies in its promise to provide a short-cut solution to all the problems that democracy has been unable to solve. But in the long run the solution is war and disaster, for it cannot be otherwise. The historical course of fascism (ancient and modern) has been pretty clearly charted by another distinguished Italian intellectual, the late Signor Guglielmo Ferrero:

". . . The initial stage is always a violent perturbation in the old legal order. Sometimes a man, sometimes a group is driven to seize power by a coup de force which violates the principles of the legality of the preexisting power. The man or group responsible . . . always believes that such a violation of legality will be only exceptional and temporary; that once he is at the helm he will have no difficulty legitimizing his rule. But that is a common error. . . . Violence, superimposed on other acts of violence, exasperates the spirit of opposition; therefore the government must do or let it be assumed that it is doing more and more extraordinary and difficult things. Thus, little by little, the usurper plunges deeper and deeper into the morass until nothing short of catastrophe can extricate him. . . . But catastrophe will always mean a general liberation—for the usurper as well as for his victims."

FOR THE SAVERS OF TIME

Where are the minutes you salvaged from wasting?
They were brimming, for others, with sun, stars, and moon;
They bubbled with brooks, clear in spring, and in autumn
Leaf-choked, and flame-brightened, and gold like the sun.

They were minutes too shallow for holding the white snow's
Falling, the robin's late call from an elm,
And black-and-white resting cows on green hillside.
What have you discovered for what you declined?

Though Time is late, learn, before the dark cover
You and your hoardings, time spent is best.
Time which is wasted is time busy, building
Sky-breasting towers, heart's best monument.

Postwar Italy

A Communication

I HAVE just learned from The Nation (October 9) that The Post has performed a valuable service to the American people in forcing the resignation of Representative E. Cox of Georgia as chairman of the committee investigating the FCC. I wish, however, that the same high sense of responsibility toward the American people and the same spirit of fair play which The Post has shown in this and other instances, would also be adopted by some of your book reviewers when writing of books dealing with political views and problems of the day.

A flagrant case of unfairness and of incompetence is Mr. William Franklin Sands' review of the book What to Do With Italy, by Prof. G. Salvemini in collaboration with the present writer. (The Post, October 10.) To begin with, Mr. Sands does not seem to be entirely at home in Italian history. He states: "As concerns Italian politics and Italian history since the Risorgimento, Professor Salvemini's attitude is that of a liberal and republican stemming directly from the school of Cavour and Garibaldi." To link together Cavour and Garibaldi as forming one school, "liberal and republican," is a new discovery which will surprise very much the Italian historians of all schools and hues.

Italian Republicans

Much more surprised will be the Italian republicans in learning that "Italian republicanism has always been masonic" and that they inherited their republicanism from the school of Cavour. They have no objections to Garibaldi, though for a time he forsook his republicanism and made to the House of Savoy the gift of the kingdom of Naples and Sicily which he had conquered from the Bourbons. But has Mr. Sands never heard the name of a certain Giuseppe Mazzini?

The Italian republicans will refuse with indignation to be identified with Italian Freemasonry, which was never lacking in devotion to the Italian monarchy. Does not Mr. Sands know that King Humbert and many other members of the royal family belonged to the Masonic brotherhood? That some members of the Republican Party may have been at the same time members of a Masonic lodge is possible and probable, but that Italian republicanism as such was Masonic is another discovery of Mr. Sands. As a matter of fact, not a few members of the Popular Party, organized by the Catholics in 1919 under the leadership of the Sicilian Don Sturzo, a learned, able and pious priest, were republican in their sentiments, because, as Don Sturzo says, they were convinced "that Italy would never know true democracy under the monarchy." (Foreign Affairs, April, 1943, 9.)

Freemasonry

As for the authors of What to Do With Italy, Mr. Sands will be disappointed to be informed that neither of them has ever had any connection, either directly or indirectly, with Freemasonry of any rite or country. They have always contended that in a free political regime there is no room for secret societies of any kind, And yet Mr. Sands' verdict is that the authors of the book, being of the Cavour-Garibaldi-Republican-Masonic school, have merely rehashed the ideas and plans of that school, applying them to the present tragic Italian situation.

It is evident that Mr. Sands has not read the book with more than a superficial attention. Otherwise he would have discovered that the plans which the authors propose for postwar Italy are precisely at the opposite pole of those that would be logical for Freemasonry. Freemasonry was not only anticlerical, but in general, at least theoretically, was anti-Catholic and denounced and condemned not only the temporal but also the spiritual claims of the church and of the Papacy. The authors of What to Do With Italy have dealt exclusively with "political" problems. They challenge Mr. Sands to find in the whole book a single phrase which attacks the spiritual and moral mission of the church.

Postwar Italy

If Mr. Sands had read at least the last chapter of the book, Church and State in Postwar Italy, he would have found out that the authors advocate the maintenance of the Lateran Treaty, which recognizes and guarantees the independence of Vatican City and the sovereignty of the Holy See. They advocate the separation of church and state under a regime of complete religious liberty which would free the Catholic Church from all pre-Fascist and Fascist forms of control of the church by the state. They advocate the restitution to the church of the funds held by the state as a result of the confiscation of ecclesiastical properties made at the beginning of the new kingdom of Italy. According to Mr. Sands, this program is of Masonic origin.

Since the plan advocated by the authors is very much similar to that adopted from the beginning by the United States, it seems that Mr. Sands, who seems to claim a kind of monopoly in the understanding of the spirit of American democracy, thinks that the fathers of this country must have been also Free Masons of the Italian type.

Mr. Sands, who displays such impressive historical learning, states also that the authors, though both professors of history at Harvard University, do not "exhibit an historical temper," and "forget or ignore to present all sides of a contested point." Mr. Sands did not feel the need of adding to this dogmatic statement any pertinent illustration. He relies on the faith of his readers. On the contrary, the authors of What to Do With Italy have quoted with meticulous care facts, sources, dates and names pertinent to every question. They will welcome any criticism of their exposition by any critic who is willing to use the same method.

Moscow Milestone

By Barnet Nover

As Three Paths Converge

ANTHONY EDEN traveled well over a 1000 miles to confer with Viacheslav Molotov at Moscow; Cordell Hull several times that far. But these distances are as nothing compared with the distance—in time and policy—which Britain, America and Russia have had to travel to reach the present point in their relations.

The road to Moscow has been long and hard, full of obstacles and frequently fog-bound, with numerous impasses and interminable detours. There were times when, even after fate had brought the three nations together as partners for the second time in a war of tremendous magnitude, it looked as if the goal would never be reached.

Before that, for a period of many years, the prevalence of mutual suspicions and distrust in Anglo-Russian-American relations made many in each of the three countries openly doubt whether the goal was worth reaching.

THE FACT that the Foreign Ministers of Britain, Russia and America are now meeting together is in and of itself a development of first importance.

It suggests a disposition, at least, to dovetail the political plans and policies of the three powers as, even without staff conferences and with the Red army and the Anglo-American forces acting independently, their military plans have increasingly dovetailed.

But the Moscow meeting is not and cannot be an end in itself; it is only the means to an end. It is not a goal but a milestone. Its success or failure will have to be judged not by the number and importance of the specific agreements reached by Messrs. Eden, Molotov and Hull but whether through these men the three nations agree on principles.

The great question which Moscow may settle, a question whose answer is certain to have a tremendous bearing on the future, is whether Britain, Russia and America can work together in the coming days of peace as they are fighting together in these grim days of war.

IN HIS LATEST SPEECH former Undersecretary Sumner Welles declared that he knew "of no point where the long-range interests of the Soviet Union are antagonistic to our own." And he added:

"Both peoples can in their own interest best afford to emphasize the many points of accord between them and minimize such differences as may appear still to exist."

This is wise counsel. In Russian-American relations, as in Anglo-Russian relations, the dead past has not yet altogether buried its dead. The ghosts of old conflicts and bygone animosities continue to haunt Moscow and London and Washington.

The Russians still vividly remember the period of intervention that followed the revolution of 1917, a period when British, French, American, Canadian, Czech and other foreign troops occupied Russian territory.

They might, at this stage, recall, however that it was public opinion in Britain and France and America which helped bring about the recall of those troops. And they might also recall that even in those dark days when suspicion of the Soviet government was widespread in this country, the United States took a strong stand in opposition to the partition of Russia and played a particularly active role in balking Japan's ambitions in Siberia.

WE, FOR OUR PART, still remember the efforts of the Kremlin-sponsored Comintern, the shock of the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact. But the Comintern is now dead beyond resurrection. And for that brief period of isolation and neutrality which the deal with Hitler vouchsafed Russia, Russia paid a very heavy price.

The price of isolation and neutrality, in whatever form, as most Americans now realize, is always heavy no matter how long the payment is deferred.

The basic reality of the present is that it is taking the combined efforts of Russia, Great Britain, the United States and their allies to overcome the German menace.

That fact is the guidepost to the future. For it is a clear indication that no nation can insure its security by itself alone. It cannot do so by any policy of isolation. It cannot do so through the acquisition of so-called strategic frontiers or the creation of buffer states or through spheres of influence.

Security can only be achieved, for Russia, as for Britain and America, through cooperative action by all three plus the nations now allied to us and all others ready and willing to join the combination.

IF THIS POINT is agreed upon at Moscow and if, further, the disposition is manifested by the participants to implement such a program, detailed problems such as what to do with Germany, what Russia's western frontiers are to be, how to organize Europe, and so on, should not prove too difficult.

A partnership of Russia, Britain and America within the framework of a world order would automatically keep the German menace within manageable bounds. It would also reduce to insignificance the importance which Russia appears to place in strategic frontiers and spheres of influence.

But, first, there must be, on the part of all concerned, the disposition to agree on major principles and broad lines of policy. Whether there is such a disposition, the Moscow meeting will soon tell.

Concerning Butter Production

In an editorial in your October 14 issue, "Erratic Butter Policy," it seems to us that you have denied credit where credit should be accorded. It appears that your editorial expresses an incomplete understanding of the program of butter purchases by the Government under a so-called set-aside arrangement instituted February 1 of this year.

This set-aside arrangement has been made variable as to quantity, roughly in relation to the normal seasonal variances in the quantities of butter produced. That there is such a seasonal production variance is not instanced in your editorial and an implication is that the conclusions that are expressed therein were reached without a recognition of this primary fact.

The War Food Administration's acquisitions of butter under the set-aside arrangement have been so regulated that from March through September the quantities available for civilian uses, month by month, have held within the upper and lower limits of approximately 109 million pounds and approximately 100 million pounds with the exception of one month, July, when the quantity dropped to perhaps 95 million pounds. Butter production is substantially smaller in the late autumn and winter months and it is throughout that period, into which we have now entered, that WFA has announced that no set-aside acquisitions will be made. If production between now and the spring of 1944 is normally seasonable there should be available for civilian consumption in each of the months of this period, according to WFA calculations, approximately 100 million to 110 million pounds of butter.

The milk and milk products economy of the United States is highly complex. Few persons, after years of study and experience, become precisely familiar even with some parts of it, let alone its whole. Any necessitous wartime confusing of that economy, however slight, is inevitably accompanied, moreover, by an emotional confusion, because the milk economy in one manner or another touches almost every American farmer, tens of thousands of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, and almost every consumer and because in terms of health, milk and the foods deriving from it, are of such vital consequence to so many individuals.

Confusions that do and will exist should be minimized, in our opinion, whenever a sober recital of fact, or an expression of opinion founded on such fact, permit.

Gouging Soldiers

I wonder whether or not Washington considers it fair that the so-called "gold mines," which are around almost all the Army camps, should overcharge the lowest paid men in the country.

We are forced to pay 30 to 35 cents for a 10-cent bottle of beer, 50 to 70 cents a drink for the cheapest whisky and 30 cents and up for a stale sandwich, if one can get it.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

If That Cigarette Famine Really Happens

Things were getting pretty desperate at the Twitchell home. Junior, age 17, was down to his last pack of cigarettes, Mr. Twitchell hadn't been able to get a smoke from his ration board in a week and it had been nearly a month since Mrs. Twitchell had smoked in bed. On top of that their little daughter, Gazonia, had just found two butts, which she had carefully concealed, missing.

"Blow me a ring, daddy," chirped 5-year-old Elbert Twitchell.

"Not this week, child," said Elmer.

"Please, daddy, blow me a ring," insisted the kid.

"Blow him a ring," commanded Mrs. Twitchell, unthinkingly.

"With what?" demanded Elmer sternly.

Mr. Twitchell, sore and angry, turned to the radio. He tuned into four programs without hearing a single word about cigarettes! He tried a fifth and a sixth in vain but as he tuned into a seventh a voice began:

"If you want to feel well-poised, self-confident and radiate those qualities which make you popular in the best circles . . ."

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "Here it comes! Some company must still be selling 'em."

But it turned out to be a commercial for a cereal.

"There's no use," said the wife sadly. "I've been listening to the radio all day and I couldn't get a single cigarette commercial."

Ordinarily the Twitchells wouldn't have minded it. But now that the big cigarette companies had discontinued their broadcasts it left a certain void in their lives. It hit their morale to feel that the cigarette people had quit on them.

"I feel sorry for all those people," sighed Elmer.

"What people?"

"The tobacco auctioneers, the tenors, and the radio comedians," sigher Elmer. "This must have thrown thousands of 'em out of work."

"Well tobacco is tobacco and war is war," said Mrs. Twitchell, trying to be philosophic, but yearning for a "butt" and health, temperament, gusto, morale and the war effort.

"I know very well I put 'em on the top shelf in the pantry," said little Miss Twitchell. "Did either of you steal 'em?"

"No, but if we had seen 'em we would have," snapped Papa Twitchell. "Any cigarette new or used around here is family property."

"It's all your fault," charged Mrs. Twitchell staring at Elmer. "If you hadn't lost our cigarette ration book we would still be smoking."

"I didn't lose it. Somebody took it."

"Who?" demanded the wife.

"Hijackers," said Elmer.

Little Miss Twitchell was putting on her hat. "Where are you going?" demanded Elmer. "And by the way I don't want you hanging around that Maltby boy. What do you see in him?"

"He's got a box of cigarettes," said the girl.

"He has!" exclaimed Mr. and Mrs. Twitchell, "Bring him over!"

Victorious Germany

If what we hear and read about the Germans exterminating their neighbors is true, and we have no reason to disbelieve the reports, then they are well on their way to winning their ends, which is the acquisition of their neighbor's lands and possessions, although they are going to lose this war. Of what earthly use is an allied victory to the millions upon millions of Poles not to mention the Czechs and other Slavs, who are dead? Their lands and homes will be untenanted or German inhabited henceforth.

What makes people think that the Germans are going to be the losers? Twenty-five years hence, a numerically much superior German nation, nourished and pampered by her present enemies, a generation brought up on military glory and the worship of Hitler, for make no mistake, Hitler will remain a hero to the children of Germany, will once again take up where their fathers left off in quest of the elusive total victory.

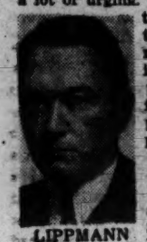
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Connally Resolution

Senator Connally's subcommittee has taken a long time about it, and has seemed to need a lot of urging. This has given the impression that the Connally resolution is a weak compromise which falls short of the proposals of the pioneers in Congress—of Messrs. Ball, Hatch, Burton, and Hill in the Senate and of Mr. Fulbright in the House.



LIPPMANN

The impression is, I think, mistaken, and I believe it can be shown that Mr. Connally's resolution is sounder and wiser than Mr. Ball's and that it is more complete than Mr. Fulbright's.

THE SECOND paragraph of the Connally resolution remedies the main defect and weakness of the Fulbright resolution. Mr. Connally says plainly that he proposes to organize the peace by cooperating with our "comrades in arms"—that is to say with the United Nations. Mr. Fulbright, on the other hand, left it much vaguer and more general as to who as a matter of fact was to have the practical initiative and was actively to assume the responsibility. His resolution speaks only of "the nations of the world."

Though there is no doubt that Mr. Fulbright himself in fact believes that the Allied Nations in the present war should become the founders and primary guardians of the future peace, it is highly important that the Senate should say so definitely.

THE DEFECT of the Ball resolution is that it implies, though in ambiguous phrase, a well-meant but, I think, unwise, undesirable, and unconsidered proposal to establish an international army. His resolution speaks of "a United Nations military force," but what Mr. Ball means by this is,—and I am sure he would confirm this because these are his own words—"a true international force, representing not individual nations but the world community," a force in which the officers and men would not be "under their national flags".

He is, in other words, proposing to police the world not with forces supplied by agreement among the member nations, but with an army recruited and commanded by an international world government. This whole conception is, it seems to me, impossible and undesirable. If such an international armed force were created, it would have to be stronger than the armed forces of any nation or combination of nations. Otherwise it could not police them. Does anyone seriously think that the British, the Russians, the Chinese, the Americans, or any of our other allies will consider disarming themselves and then entrusting to an international army, composed as it would have to be of professional mercenaries, the power to coerce them? The proposal is so unconsidered that to continue to press it can only obstruct and confuse practical measures to combine and concert national forces to maintain peace.

THIS PROPOSAL for an international army is the substantial reason why so many feel they must, as the Connally resolution does, reassert the principle that the new "international authority" is to be composed of "free and sovereign nations."

We should not hesitate, I believe, to reaffirm this principle. What we should insist upon is that in all discussions of it sovereignty be defined in the historic American, which is also the civilized European, sense of the word. The founders of the Republic, who established the sovereignty of the United States in the period from 1776 to 1789, were men deeply grounded in the civilized tradition of the Western world. As long as we adhere to their conception of sovereignty we shall stand on solid ground.

THEY NEVER imagined for a moment, and they rejected utterly, the notion, which Hitler has revived, that a sovereign state is a law unto itself, and that it has the right to do whatever it has the power to do. The rights of a sovereign, or as they called it, of a free and independent state, were derived from and were limited by "the law of Nature and of Nature's God," and the rights of a people had to be exercised with "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind."

The laws of Nature and Nature's God were, as they understood them, the underlying principles which reasonable men discerned and conscientious men acknowledged in the body of the common law, in the customs and precedents of the law of nations, in documents like the Bill of Rights. Nations and individual men were free under these universal laws, and the Constitution, all statutes, all policy were, as they saw it, valid and binding only if conforming to this universal tradition of civilized law.

This is the conception of sovereignty which Hitler and his confederates have challenged, and we must not fall into the grave error of imitating him.

NOR MUST we continue to ignore the plain words of the men who, because they established American sovereignty, are the highest authority on what sovereignty means. Thus it is often said by some who seem never to have read the Declaration of Independence to its conclusion that to contract alliances—a plain honest word which the squeamish find too blunt—is to surrender our sovereignty. The fact is that the leaders of the American Revolution declared that the "full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances" is the essential mark of a sovereign state.

Their real view, which they made as plain as words can make it, was that a sovereign state is bound in all its actions by a higher law than the passing whims and notions of its government; but if its purpose is lawful in the full civilized meaning of the word it may in order to achieve its purpose make war, make peace, contract alliances, and enter into all necessary agreements.

Camera Bares Goldbrickers, Steinbeck Says

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean war theater—I suppose that there is no weapon which so slyly and surely attacks the souls of men as a moving picture camera does. Men who are disgusted or hurt or just plain ignorant react to a Bell & Howell Eyemo as a frog does to a hot rock.

One of our best sports writers suggested one time that the best way to get touchdowns in football was to mount a newsreel camera between the goal posts. It is a secret weapon which dissects people and brings out the curious childish ego that every one has and lays it spread out thick on the surface.

Recently in Africa and Sicily and Italy we (not editorial we, but a camera man and I) were working on a technical picture for the Army and there we discovered that the same force which operates at Long Island garden parties and at tennis matches also works on a battle line. It worked everywhere.

Camera Gets 'Em All

Weary troops straightened up and marched stiffly and some of them tried to hog the camera and some of them looked fierce and soldierly. All shoulders went back and steps quickened. The thinly covered actor in every one came out.

A line of Army stevedores on a dock in a North African port suddenly, on seeing the camera, began to pass boxes of C-rations with a speed and rhythm which has probably never been duplicated in Army history. Of course the moment the camera was moved they went back to a much more sensible, gold-bricking pace, but for the few feet of film we have, the boxes shot by and piled up in a mountain out of camera range.

The Arabs, Too

The impact of the camera is by no means limited to the Americans. Our picture had to do with all kinds of work and all kinds of men. One day we set up on a barge where a number of Arabs were employed to unload cargo and, incidentally, were doing the finest bit of sleep walking I have ever seen.

Each Arab regarded each box as a personality he didn't like, one which he touched with reluctance and got rid of with relief. His repugnance, however, did not make him carry it to its destination with any speed that required streamlining. With these people we did not find any speed-up when the camera was produced. The moment it began to turn, every Arab stood up grandly and presented his profile and looked sternly toward Mecca.

Arab Always Noble

Time and time again we tried to catch them in what is called a natural pose, not of work, because that would be a contradiction in terms, but just relaxed and looking Arab. But either they had seen too many Hollywood films of Valentino as an Arab, or Valentino had studied Arabs under the impact of the camera. We never caught them any other way except looking sternly offstage, always in profile and always noble.

We had wanted to get them relaxed because I suppose Arabs have as few noble moments as any one in the world. Bushmen may compete with them in this respect but I doubt it. And they could not be fooled. They knew when the camera was turning and when it wasn't. They were as highly trained in stealing scenes from each other as dress extras in Hollywood. Finally we gave up.

They will continue noble as far as we are concerned. We will perpetuate this myth of the noble Arab. The moment we stopped shooting they collapsed into natural Arabs, but we never got it on film.

The camera works everywhere. There is no ferocity like that on the face of a quarterback who is running, not at an opponent but at Pathe coverage on a tripod. And this may all be egotism, but there was one example of something that seems to be much more than this.

One day we set up the camera to photograph the discharge of the cargo of a hospital ship which had been loaded in Sicily. The side doors of the ship were opened and the wooden platform was extended. The lines of ambulances were drawn up on the pier, and then the stretcher bearers came down in a steady line with the wounded men sitting and lying and huddled and stretched out in positions indicated by the nature of their wounds.

Some of them were sick with pain, were gray with pain, and some were only slightly hurt so that their eyes were clear. And not one single man, as he passed the camera failed to respond to it. Every one gave it either a smile or a little nod. Some saluted it gravely. The rigid features changed and the eyes brightened, and if an arm could move it moved in greeting.

I think this was not egotism. I think these men, each one of them, had a quick thought. "Some one at home will see this picture. I must appear less badly hurt than I am. Otherwise they might worry." I think those tired smiles were a great hunk of consideration and courage.

Wallace Sees New Monopoly Of Transport

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Oct. 20.—Vice President Wallace said tonight the "public transport is again being brought under monopoly control," and "the evil consequences are everywhere apparent."

"The day of accounting has come," he declared in a speech prepared for delivery before local civic and labor groups.

Wallace leveled five specific charges:

"Excessive transportation rates burden agriculture and industry and trade.

"Noncompetitive rates deprive agriculture and industry of the benefits of more efficient and cheaper forms of transportation.

"Discriminatory rates are keeping the South and the West in a colonial status.

"Newer forms of transportation are being brought under monopoly control.

"Monopolistic conditions already present in transportation are fostering monopolies in industry."

The Vice President said the people of the entire South and West "have experienced the effects of excessive transportation charges—the high cost of the necessities of life and the inability to market the products of their labor."

"Disproportionate and high rates have limited consumption and have penalized the farmer for producing abundantly," he said.

Renegotiation Policy Board Is Established

By Ben W. Gilbert

Beating Congress to the punch, Government war procurement agencies yesterday established an overall price adjustment board to set Government policy on renegotiation of war contracts to eliminate excessive profits.

The new board will set policy for six Government agencies which have set up price adjustment boards under the current renegotiation statute.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee considering possible revisions of the statute has already decided to recommend to the full committee the establishment of such an overall board.

Disney Sees Merit in Plan

Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, chairman of the renegotiation subcommittee, observed that there must have been merit in his group's suggestion for an over-all price board if the executive departments adopted it.

He said that he planned to propose to the subcommittee that the over-all price board be given jurisdiction, too, over policy matters affecting amortization of war plants and termination of war contracts. He said he had discussed this plan with subcommittee members informally and that an agreement on it was likely.

Hearings Today and Tomorrow

Meanwhile, it was announced that a subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee will hold hearings on proposed legislation on the question of terminating war contracts today and tomorrow.

The new over-all price adjustment board was given authority to assign a manufacturer to an individual department for renegotiation purposes. At present, contractors who make articles for more than one agency are confronted with the task of having their books checked by several agencies, with each one governed by a different renegotiation policy.

Joseph M. Dodge, chairman of the War Department's Price Adjustment Board, was made chairman of the new board.

Carman G. Blough of the War Production Board was given a seat on the body, even though the WPB does not negotiate contracts, because the WPB has some authority over questions of procurement policy.

Other Members on New Board

Other members of the new board are Kenneth M. Rockey, chairman of the Navy PAB, to serve as vice chairman; Thomas M. Woodward, chairman of the Maritime Commission PAB, also reprepresenting the War Shipping Administration; Capt. Harry C. Maull, jr., chairman of the Treasury PAB; Charles T. Fisher, jr., chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation PAB.

The new board will be responsible for interpreting the renegotiation statute, will define exemptions of minerals, and production of primary natural resources, will establish other exemptions classes, and will prescribe the forms of financial statements to be filed by contractors.

Politics Taboo Sought in Bill On Bond Ads

By the Associated Press

Backers of a bill authorizing the Treasury to spend 30 million dollars annually for war bond advertising in newspapers agreed yesterday to an amendment designed to keep "political propaganda" out of the advertisments.

Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut proposed such an amendment in a hearing before the Senate Banking Committee, and it immediately was agreed to by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, author of the bill.

Danaher exhibited a copy of a third war loan drive advertisement prepared as a newspaper model by the Treasury Department and bearing a picture of President Roosevelt.

"Here's an example of the kind of ads the Treasury would put in every newspaper in the country, if no restrictions are put in this bill," Danaher said. "They would use this to attempt to capitalize on the bond selling campaigns for the benefit of incumbent officials. The people shouldn't have to pay for advertisements containing pictures of political candidates."

Phil Rich, publisher of the Midland (Mich.) Daily News, testifying at the time, said he thought publishers would not object to a definite restriction such as Danaher proposed.

"Newspapers should not be expected to furnish free to the Government the space upon which they depend for existence," said Tobey, a member of the Senate Banking Committee, which resumed hearings on the bill introduced by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Oklahoma.

The bill now provides that the advertising space purchased by the Treasury "shall be divided equitably among all newspapers of general circulation," in cooperation with recognized publishers' associations, with half the fund to be used in newspapers published in cities of under 10,000 population and half in cities over 10,000.

Rockefeller to Sell Stocks in Order To Buy U. S. Bonds

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller has arranged to sell 25 million dollars worth of his holdings of Standard Oil stocks to permit expansion of his investment in United States Government bonds, it was disclosed today.

Disposal of this block of Rockefeller holdings was made known by the investment banking firm of Dillon, Read & Co. in an announcement that the firm and a Nationwide group of investment houses would publicly offer the shares on Monday.

Stocks to be sold publicly are: 200,000 shares of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), 500,000 shares of Socony-Vacuum Oil, 100,000 shares of Standard Oil Co. of California, 50,000 shares of Standard Oil of Indiana and 150,000 shares of Sinclair Oil Corp.

Rockefeller, according to Dillon-Read, stated that he already has large holdings of Government bonds but he wishes to increase these holdings in support of the war effort and that these sales were made for that purpose.

Dr. Ruhland Backed by Medical Group

Characterizing Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, as "outstanding," the Medical Society of the District yesterday issued a statement opposing his removal as recommended by a Senate subcommittee which recently investigated Gallinger Hospital.

Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, president of the society, and the chairman of its executive board, Dr. Henry R. Schreiber, announced the organization's stand. They said that any attempt to remove Dr. Ruhland from his post was "unjustified and detrimental to the best interests of the community."

"On the basis of his record," the society's statement declared, "our executive board believes he is entitled to the wholehearted support not only of the medical profession but of the people of the District of Columbia."

"As to the situation at Gallinger Hospital, the board wishes to call attention to the fact that this institution is staffed in a large part by physicians in the District who render service to that institution without compensation. Among them are the ablest medical practitioners in this city. Patients at Gallinger are, therefore, receiving the best medical care available in Washington. So far as we know, no recognition has been given to this fact by the investigators.

"Our society is deeply concerned with maintaining the highest possible standards of medical practice in this community and it will be glad at any time to lend its best efforts to that end."

Fathers Face Certain Draft Next Month

District Selective Service headquarters yesterday acknowledged that, "short of a miracle," fathers will certainly be drafted in November to fill the Washington quota for that month.

The number to be taken for the first part of November will probably be determined by local draft boards within the next few weeks, it was learned, with a hold-off for the second half until it can be determined whether other nonfather classes can be depended on to complete the quota.

Selective Service officials were unable to state even the approximate number of the District's 30,000 fathers between the ages of 18 and 38 who would be put into uniform.

The figure on other classes of available men fluctuates constantly, it was explained. Expired deferments among nonfathers and the coming of age of 18-year-olds, for example, might increase the number of childless draftees and, therefore, decrease the number of parents required to fill the quota.

In any event, it was stated, draft boards will continue to draw on registrants in this order: Volunteers (those who ask for 1-A classification), single men without dependents, single men with collateral dependents (father or mother), married men without children, fathers in nondeferrable occupations and, last, married men with pre-Pearl Harbor children.

The local quota to be filled in December will go out to draft boards on November 1, according to Selective Service.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Record employment of 63,900,000 persons in the United States was reported today by the National Industrial Conference Board for August.

School Aid Bill Recommitted In Senate Vote

The Senate sent a $300,000,000 school-aid bill to a committee pigeon-hole yesterday after opponents tacked on an amendment designed to prevent racial or other discrimination in the distribution of either Government or State school funds.

By a vote of 53 to 26, it recommitted the measure to the Education Committee on motion of Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio.

Southern Senators, among the principal supporters of the bill, joined its opponents in voting to send it back to committee after acceptance of the antiracial amendment, offered by Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota.

Even Senator Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, who introduced the bill jointly with Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah voted to recommit it.

Under the bill, 200 million dollars would be allocated in proportion to pupil attendance in the various States. The other 100 hundred million dollars, intended to equalize educational opportunities, would be distributed on the basis of financial need, reckoned under a complicated formula.

108 Nurses Enroll In U. S. Corps for Wartime Training

One hundred and eight students in St. Elizabeths School of Nursing are enrolled in the United States Cadet Nurse Corps, according to Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The nurses are receiving free training through funds provided under the Bolten Act, and have agreed to serve in essential civilian or military nursing for the duration, he said.

St. Elizabeths, Dr. Overholser stated, is stepping up its training program with an accelerated course, adding that present plans call for a student body of 185.

St. Elizabeths is one of six schools of nursing in the District taking part in the cadet nurse program. The others are Freedmen's, Garfield, Georgetown, Providence and Sibley.

$30,000 Fund Deposited for Service Center

An initial fund of $30,000 for running expenses of the United Nations Service Center was established yestehray when Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, regional supervisor, War Public Services Division, Federal Works Agency, and Floyd D. Akers, president of Recreation Services, Inc., deposited checks of $15,000 each.

The center will be opened Wednesday in the Capitol Park Hotel and is to accomodate some 300 transient enlisted personnel and officers. Located near Union Station, it will be operated largely by volunteers.

War Hospitality Committee officials yesterday expressed the belief that no further investment will be necessary and that the center will operate on a self-sustaining basis.

Volunteers for the day shifts are still needed, it was said. The night shifts are all filled. Volunteers, who will work under a small paid supervisory staff, should register with the Civilian Defense Volunteer Service, 2324 F st. nw.

Soldier Pauses to Ask About D. C.

Down under in the Southwest Pacific theater of operations all is not jungle, sweat, tears and killing, and soldiers have lots of time to delve into political subdivisions that, as in the case of a V-mail letter received by The Post, lead to the $64 question.

Writes Sergt. C. F. Warner, formerly of Glover Park:

"This letter will, in all probability, seem quite irregular to you. It is coming from the Southwest Pacific theater of war, in which about the only thing we have to do in our spare time is to start an argument on some subject. Sometimes they are difficult to settle. At present the $64 question: "Is Georgetown in Washington, D. C., or is it in Maryland." I have lived in Glover Park, which is near there, and always believed Georgetown to not only be in Washington, but to be one of the oldest sections of the city. A reply would be greatly appreciated.

"SERGT. C. F. WANER,
No. 33190064, Fifty-eighth T. C. S. Squadron, 375th T. C. Group, A. P. O. 503, Unit 1, care Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif."

You're O. K., Sarge. Georgetown is in the District and is one of the oldest sections.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Redskins will probably lick the Chicago Cardinals come Sunday at Griffith Stadium but they won't run wild in the process. No team has been running very successfully against the Cardinals this season despite their four straight defeats and the lack of a victory. The opposition may pass and do very well, but the Cardinals' watchword this season has been "they shall not run."

POVICH

F'r instance, when the Cardinals were beaten, 7-0, by the Detroit Lions last week, the Lions' total net yardage gained was a minus 36. That's the kind of a line the Cardinals have come up with. In that 20-0 defeat by the Bears, the Cardinals held the Bears to a total of 78 yards rushing, which is considerably below par for the Bears.

In fact, one man in the Cardinal backfield gained more ground rushing the ball than the Bears did. He's John Grigas who is becoming a very slick article in his first season as a pro. The football world suddenly heard of Grigas late last season. He's the Holy Cross boy who took the field that day against an unbeaten Boston College team and paced Holy Cross to an incredible 55-12 victory.

The man who has done a whale of a job on the Cardinal line is the team's head coach, newly appointed to succeed Jimmy Conzelman. He is Phil Handler, who came out of T. C. U. in 1930 as one of the great guards of Southwest football and played seven years as a pro before starting a six-year term as an assistant coach of the Cardinals that led to his appointment, finally, as boss.

Charley Bidwill, the rich Chicagoan who bankrolls the Cardinals, named Handler his coach with the blessings of the retiring Conzelman. Handler played for a succession of Cardinal coaches, Ernie Nevers, Jack Chevigny, Paul Schissler and Milan Creighton, before coaching the line for Nevers and Conzelman.

Coaching the Cardinals is a pretty good job, despite the fact that the club has had only one winning season in the last 12. Mr. Bidwill never squawks. "The only time he comes around," says Handler, "is after a ball game and you can never tell from his disposition whether we won or lost. A sweet fellow to work for."

Handler says he would go right out on a limb and pick his Cardinals to beat the Redskins, or any other team in the league, if they had the proper kind of passer. "With Baugh, or Luckman we couldn't miss the championship," he says frankly. "But we haven't come up with a fellow who can throw that ball like those guys."

Ronnie Cahill, a Holy Cross graduate, hasn't quite justified his college reputation as a passer. His lack of height is a handicap. Another Cardinals' passer is Joe Bukant, a veteran out of Washington University. The Cards aren't a passing team.

The tough part of it is that the Cardinals hold title to two men, either one of whom could do a fine job of the passing, but are unavailable. Glenn Dobbs, the 6-foot 2-inch Tulsa lad who gave the Redskins fits in the 1943 All-Star game at Chicago, was called up by the Navy on the day he was due to report to the Cardinals. The Cardinals also own George Stirnweiss, a fine passer when he was with North Carolina, but the Yankees won't let him play pro football.

The Cardinals must be an unlucky team. They were on the Lions' 10-yard line and driving for a touchdown on first down, when an offside penalty put them back. They were inside the Bears' 20-yard line four times but were beaten on long passes by a team that didn't get within the Cards' 20 all day. In the exhibition game against the Redskins in Buffalo before the start of the season, the Cardinals lost the key man of their backfield, Marshall Goldberg, who broke an ankle.

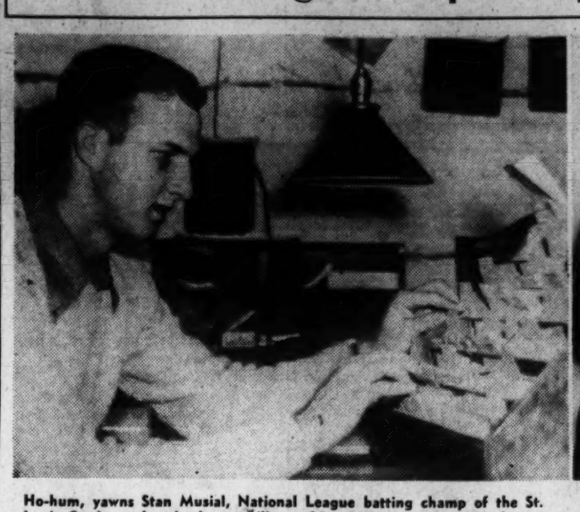
They rushed the daylights out of Frankie Sinkwich in the Lions' game last week and disposed of him as a passing threat, but they anticipate no such great success against Baugh. "I still remember that game in Buffalo," said Handler, "when we had three men crawling up Baugh's back on one pass play but he got the ball away and completed it to our 3-yard line. He's tougher to get to than Sinkwich."

Handler is moaning the lack of an adequate passer the more because he says he has two of the league's finest receivers this year. They are Eddie Rucinski, the Indiana boy who was obtained from Brooklyn, and Don Currivan, from Boston College. Handler says flatly "there aren't two better ends in the league."

The Cardinals haven't licked the Redskins since the first year the Redskins moved to Washington. That was 1937, when Gaynell Tinsley ran wild on the receiving end of passes to beat Washington, 21-14. He caught three, thrown by his old Louisiana State teammate, Pat Coffee. They both came up as freshmen with the pros that season. Coffee joined the team on Thursday and had one day of practice before throwing those three touchdown passes to Tinsley. It was a new scoring weapon for the Cardinals but it was old stuff for Tinsley and Coffee at L. S. U.

But the Cardinals' luck in having such a guy as Coffee around didn't last long. His father struck it rich, in Louisiana oil, and he quit the game.

How Batting Champion Spends Off-Season Time—No Glamor, But He Likes It



Ho-hum, yawns Stan Musial, National League batting champ of the St. Louis Cards, as he checks waybills on his wintertime job at his hometown Donora, Pa., zinc works of the American Steel and Wire Company.

Life on the road with the Cardinals was never like this, Stan muses as he samples the stew his pretty wife Lillian has prepared for supper. And even checking those waybills gives a man a real appetite.

Stan heard different bedtime stories than the sort he's reading to Dickie when he was making the rounds of the National League clubs and whanging the old apple better than anyone else in it last summer.

Uline Raps Ring Body, Bans Boxing at Arena

Charges 'Unfair' Treatment

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Charging the District Boxing Commission had treated him "unfairly from beginning to end," Migiel J. (Mike) Uline yesterday closed the doors of his spacious Uline Arena to future boxing matches, effective after Promoter Goldie Ahearn's next show, Friday, November 5.

In announcing his decision to boot boxing into his persona' ashcan, Uline said he would concentrate on public ice-skating, which starts November 6; rodoes, ice shows, concerts and public dances with name bands. Although unannounced, it is accepted around town that Uline Arena this year will play host to the "Ice Follies," which formerly played at Riverside Stadium; the "Ice-Capades," and possibly other topnotch ice presentations.

Principal reason behind Uline's decision to give the ring game the heave-ho is the refusal of the Boxing Commission to grant Promoter Goldie Ahearn Monday night dates in favor of Promoter Joe Turner, who presents boxing cards at his Turner's Arena on Mondays. The commission, which has turned down numerous requests by Ahearn for Monday dates, ruled that Turner's prior claims to Mondays entitles him first crack at those nights.

Monday Nights Slow

Uline said he was willing to permit fights to be staged at his place on Mondays as that is the slowest skating night in the week. In contrast, Fridays, with no school on Saturdays, is one of the best nights in the week. Uline estimated his "take" from the fight gate on Fridays would not compensate him sufficiently in comparisons with sizable skating revenue loss on those nights, whereas Monday nights it would because of a slim "take" in skating revenue.

Uline lambasted the Boxing Commission without regard to feelings and spared no words in declaring the commission not only treated him unfairly, but said it "fought hime all the way." He cited several instances, in addition to the commission refusing him Monday night, claiming the commission had at various times "tried to set price scales," "made much ado about ice under an insulated flooring when every arena in the country conducts boxing that way without opposition," and had made "thoroughly unreasonable demands for free tickets."

Instance Is Cited

Last December 8, Uline said, the Boxing Commission, then composed of Chairman Claude W. Owen, Thomas F. Morgan, jr., and Police Lieut. John J. Agnew, objected when Promoter Ahearn attempted to establish a 50-cent, $1 and $1.50 "popular price" scale for club fights. Then, the night of the card, held up the show more than an hour because ice was on the flooring under insulated boards, with the result that hundreds demanded refunds and many more were turned away at the door. Ahearn sued the commission as a result, but later

Football's Attendance Shows Drop

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 20.—Football fans, like other sports spectators, are choosy about the attractions they attend, a nationwide survey by the Associated Pres showed today.

Attendance at the home games of a representative group of approximately three score colleges and universities this fall has totaled 1,827,454 for 133 games while last year 138 games at the same schools drew 2,111,990.

This drop of 284,536 for roughly half the season amounts to 13 per cent without taking into account the fact that last year's total includes fivem ore games than this year's.

However, a good part of this reduction apparently has been caused by the weak teams and makeshift schedules which are serving to keep football alive, if not lusty, at many schools.

Notre Dame-Army Sold Out

For instance, Yale, which drew 114,000 for its first three home games last year when Lehigh, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth were the opponents, this fall was dropped to 37,000 for three games with Muhlenberg, Rochester and the Coast Guard Academy.

Nebraska, with a strong team in 1942, averaged 20,000 for each of its first three games. This year the Cornhuskers have played only once at home, against Indiana, and drew 4,500.

On the other hand, Michigan, which drew 57,000 for its first two games with Great Lakes and Michigan State in 1942, this year has drawn 104,000 for two tussles with Western Michigan and Notre Dame.

The Notre Dame-Michigan game lured out 86,000 fans, the biggest crowd ofthe season, but there have been several others in the 40,000 to 50,000 bracket and the Army-Notre Dame game at New York November 6 has sold out the 72,000-capacity Yankee Stadium three weeks in advance.

This would seem to prove that the fans will go to the games that mean something even though attendance generally has declined.

Navy Seeking RevengeOver Georgia Tech

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 20.—When Navy's Middies set sail against Georgia Tech at Baltimore Stadium Saturday night you can bet your last string of Indian wampum they will be out to derail the Rambling Wreck, but they will be in a tight spot.

With between 45,000 and 50,000 fans expected, the Middies want to extend their victory string to five straight without a defeat. But while they are battling the Yellow Jackets their eyes will be on their traditional battle against Notre Dame's fast-moving Irish and Angelo Bertelli at Cleveland October 30.

There is where the rub comes. The Sailors have to lick a fine ball club in Coach Bill Alexander's Engineers, but thinking about Bertell & Co., they can't afford to tip their mitts completely.

They Want Revenge

The Annapolis boys want to lick Tech in revenge for that 21-to-0 whitewash Eddie Prokop and his mates handed a good Middy team last fall. Too, this game is a rubber contest, because the Sailors trounced the Rambling Wreck back in 1922, score 13 to 0.

All of the Navy injured from that bruising affair with Duke will be ready with the possible exception of Jim Pettit, a track dash star and the fastest Sailor halltoter. Capt. Al Channel is recovered and will be back at left end to furnish a spark that was badly lacking in Navy's win over Penn State.

Navy was lucky to squeak by State's heavier Nittany Lions, with key men hurt, and playing in rain and wind that worked havoc with the razzle-dazzle in which the Middies toss the pigskin around like a basketball. In addition, the tide was going out from the Duke scrap.

Plenty of Hocus Pocus

Likely enough the Tech-Navy battle will be a wide-open affair with hocus pocus, long runs by star backs behand good blocking, and plenty of passing with little Hal Hamberg, all-round Navy ace, showing the way through the air.

That is the way Tech plays under Alexander and for the first time in years Navy is fielding a team that opens the throttle wide with a scoring punch. It ought to be a whale of a scrap and anything can happen if the Middies take their eyes off the Jackets and look toward Notre Dame.

Duncan, Goode On Monday Card

A six-round semiwindup, bringing together Corpl. Billy Duncan, Fort Belvoir soldier, and Oscar Goode, of Newark, was announced yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner to supplement the Larry Lane-George Parks 10-round bout Monday night at Turner's Arena. Duncan has won his last six bouts here. Goode is a stablemate of Lane's. Turner last night indicated the winner would be given a shot at Perk Daniels, 205-pound Chicago defense worker.

Cards' Great End, Rucinski, Skips Practice for War Job

Two Other Players Use Plane Travel For Weekend Games; Cards Practice Here

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Some weeks Chicago Cardinal Coach Phil Handler doesn't see End Eddie Rucinski from Sunday to Sunday, but that's quite all right with Phil, for if all the Cardinals performed with practice like Rucinski without it the Cards and Chicago Bears would exchange places in the pro league standings.

Handler and his player-coach assistant, Buddy Parker, bossed the Cards' practice session yesterday afternoon at Griffith Stadium without Rucinski, Andy Puplis and Lee Stokes. They will all be on hand before Sunday's clash with the Redskins but their jobs are more important during the week.

Rucinski, with a war job in Indianapolis, has been playing the finest football of his career and the Cardinal coaches say there is not a better end in the league. All conversations on ends, of course, exclude Packer Don Hutson. He's in a class to himself.

Didn't Change Mind

The Cardinals outsmarted the Brooklyn Dodgers on the Rucinski deal. They traded Gaynell Tinsley, who had said he was through with football, for Rucinski, but the Dodgers went into the deal thinking they could change Tinsley's mind. They came out of the deal without him and the Cards had Rucinski.

Rucinski, who played college ball with Indiana, is second only to Wilbur Moore in the pass catching department with 188 yards gained on 12 passes. But his defensive play has been his strong point in four games which he has averaged 59 minutes playing time.

Rucinski keeps in shape through late afternoon workouts in Indianapolis. The Cards never see him before Thursday preceding their next game (he will be here today), usually it's Saturday and sometimes Sunday. Last week he reported in Buffalo late Saturday and played 60 minutes of football against the Detroit Lions. Rucinski helped the victorious Lions to a minus 40 yards rushing.

Puplis, quarterback from Notre Dame, coaches Proviso High in Chicago and he usually flies to out-of-town games. His high school team plays Friday or Saturday of each week, making it impossible for Puplis to report sooner. Puplis is not in the starting lineup but has been in every game.

Holds Down War Job

Stokes, second string center, holds down a war job in Detroit and he's another of the Cardinals' weekend only squad members. Stokes has taken a few days off and will be here today, which will give him three days practice, his longest consecutive practice string of the season.

The Cardinals worked nearly three hours yesterday and Handler pronounced his 26 available men in good shape for the 'Skins. Marshall Goldberg, whose ankle was broken in the Redskin-Cardinal exhibition in Buffalo, is on the inactive player list. The Cards have lost four straight games, but have shown definite improvement in each outing.

NOTES—The Redskin practice was delayed yesterday as fans from the Armstrong-Dunbar game mobbed Sammy Baugh for autographs and Sam had to retire to the clubhouse until the field was cleared . . . Eddy Gilmore, now Associated Press correspondent in Moscow and former sportswriter here, cabled the Redskin office yesterday as follows: "If BBC can give us World Series results why can't someone let us have Redskins, Best regards football writers, Dutch, Turk, Sid." . . . That Karcis in the New York Giant lineup last Sunday was Bill Karcis, last year's coach of the victoryless Detroit Lions . . . Four former Redskins played for the Eagles against the Bears—Roy Zimmerman, Bob Masters, Ray Reutt and Ted Laux. . . . According to a "loyal south stand fan," a glaring red patch on the trousers of the trombone player on the right rear corner of the Redskin Band is annoying, to say the least, and the southsiders wonder if something couldn't be done about it, in view of the 'Skins' highly successful financial season . . . The Redskins' management laughed off a

Golf Annual

JESS SWEETSER

The 1922 combination of Jess Sweetser winning, Jim Preston scoring, was repeated at Woodmont Country Club yesterday as the former National Amateur Champion won the National Press Club golf tournament with a 37, 38—75.

In '22 when Sweetser won the Amateur at the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., Jim Preston was handling the press tent scoreboard for the United States Golf Association, a pet chore of his for more than a decade.

Yesterday, Preston, former superintendent of the House Press Gallery and now of the Senate Secretary's Office, renewed friendships with Sweetser as perennial chairman of the Press Club tournament. Sweetser, a Washington resident for several months and a new member of the Press Club, won low gross over a field of 37 with a 38-37, 75, six over par but a creditable round considering the wind and it was his first trek around the tricky course.

Sweetser won a war bond and the George R. Holmes Memorial trophy by a single stroke over John E. McClure, Burning Tree Club champion and five-times winner of the Press Club title. McClure posted a 39-37, 76, received $10 in war stamps and the AAA trophy.

E. A. Merkle, former winner of all three major trophies, finished third with a gross of 40-41, 81.

The National Press Club plaque for first low net went to Paul Wooten, of McGraw-Hill publications, with a 98-36, 62. Handicaps were figured on the score of the nine even numbered holes, minus par for those holes with the subtracted figure doubled.

Prizes in war stamps also were awarded to Judge W. E. Richardson, second low net with 95-32, 64 and James Oastler, of the Canadian Press, 114-50, 64. Prize for the third highest score went to David J. Berger, with 110.

Terrapin Line Weakened by Loss of Rock

University of Maryland's tough forward wall will be further weakened Saturday when the Terps meet a big and rugged Penn State eleven at Byrd Stadium, College Park, for it was learned yesterday that Wilbur Rock, a combination tackle and end, would be unable to take the field.

Rock wrenched his knee in practice Tuesday but it was not until yesterday that it was known the injury was serious enough to keep the 192-pound former Central High tackle idle against the same Nittany Lion crew that held undefeated Navy to a one-touchdown victory last week.

Pat McCarthy, outstanding Old Line end, also will be lost Saturday. He will go into the armed services.

The Terp line, which has not allowed a touchdown in four tough games, will be further juggled by Coach Dr. Clarence W. Spears. Les Daly, a guard, will be shifted to end along with Frank Doory, a former back, to supplant Rock and McCarthy. Vic Hurson, a former end who has been proving a bulwark at center, will continue at the pivot post but will be available for relief wing duty. Bob Hafer, a guard, and Dick Terry, a reserve center, are temporarily slated to relieve Doory and Daly. The rest of the line will include Walt Klodne and Larry Cooper at tackles; Pete Karangelen and Mike Teslovich, a former tackle, at guards, with Mi[illegible] Zetts available should any of the bulwarks falter.

Spears plans to start the same backfield that was used most of the time in the Old Liners' tough, 6-2 loss to West Virginia, composed of Joe Makar at quarter; Charley Ryan and Dick Tuschak at halves, and either Bill Pirronello or [illegible]b Troll at fullback.

Major Leaguers Train North in '44

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—The office of Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, announced tonight that the 1944 training camps of major league teams again will be located in Northern States, as they were this year because of war and travel conditions.

"Major league clubs will train in the North next year, as they did in 1943," the announcement said.

Laing Is Coolidge Threat Against Anacostia Tomorrow

Coach Gilbert Conn of Coolidge, who's already pulled plenty of tricks out of his grid bag this year to the surprise and consternation of sundry other high schools, may have a new one in Bill Laing at right half when his team starts against Anacostia Friday.

Laing is an Ohio boy who started late with the squad, was hurt shortly after he arrived, and who has played only a short time, then at end. But Conn believes the 175-pounder will add just the spark his backfield needs.

But the big question in the game is whether "Flea" Flaherty, the Anacostia pass threat, will be able to play. Just how much his lame shoulder has improved could not be learned last night, but there's still a possibility he may be able to play part of the game.

Central, which meets Western Friday, will be starting from scratch as far as its line-up is concerned, Coach John Jankowski said last night. For instance, Donohue is shifting from right half to end, and other changes are just as drastic. Western's Charlie Kidwell at tackle probably is out for the season, Coach Fred Mulvey said, and will be replaced by either Krouse or O'Neill.

For the spot game Saturday the Eastern Ramblers probably will be showing Tech a somewhat refurbished ball club, for Coach Dick Mentzer avers that Monday's scrimmage showed them rounding into shape, with Alex Vorobey in the backfield showing the most improvement.

Duke Jacobs' Tech boys probably are the hard-luck outfit of this series when it comes to injuries, and their last start against St. John's was no exception, for no less than nine men will be out of most or all of the Eastern game. They aren't all first stringers, but they're important.

Woodrow Wilson faces a tough one Friday against Georgetown Prep, and the Rough Riders will bump into the Washington-Lee Generals. Other Friday games: St. Alban's at St. Andrew's, Wilmington, Del., and Fairfax at George Washington High, Alexandria.

On Saturday Gilman School of Baltimore at Episcopal High, Alexandria; Bullis Prep at Staunton, Va., and Charlotte Hall at Devitt Prep. The Bullis-Devitt game for November 6 has been canceled, incidentally, and Bullis is seeking another game for that date.

On Sunday Gonzaga will play Calvert Hall at Baltimore.

Yvon Robert Mat Victor

Big Yvon Robert, one of the louder of the myriad claimants of the mythical world's wrestling championship, defeated Maurice La Chappelle, in what was billed as a titular match before 1800 fans at Turner's Arena last night.

Just before the finish the Frenchman weakened his cause when he missed a flying tackle and took a header out of the ring. After that he was easy prey for the champ. The fans were treated to some extremely clever wrestling unmarred by dramatics or foul tactics.

George Macricostas and Michele Leone scuffled to a draw in the semifinal, which boasted lots of comedy. The veiled Blue Streak, alias Old-Timer Billy Bartush, won a nasty brawl from Art Le Grande, Robert's stablemate, after 16 minutes. Young Billy Darnell defeated Allen Cherney, the Alexandria Torpedo Plant worker, with a body press in 10½ minutes. John Melas and Johnny Vanski worked to a nasty stalemate. As usual, Vanski started the fire, but Melas added fuel of his own in good measure.

Trotto, Taylor Draw In NTS Ring Bouts

Highlighted by a sensational three-round draw between Pete Trotto and Hal Taylor in the 145-pound class, seven bouts among National Training School prospective amateur tournament entrants were staged last night at Fort Washington by Coach Bill McGeever. Results:

112-pound class—John Kelly decisioned Leo Tezzola.
126-pound class—Bill Colon decisioned John Davis.
130-pound class—Bob Harris decisioned Ted McIntosh.
135-pound class—Bernie Barry decisioned Charles Rockinsberry.
140-pound class—Bob Rayburn scored k.o. over Bob Bernhardt in 1:54 of first.
145-pound class—Pete Trotto and Hal Taylor drew.
160-pound class—Bill Davison decisioned James Poff.

Pros' Chief Gains Are on Passes This Year

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Lay that football down, son—right down the field and into your teammate's arms. This season you've got a much better chance of gaining ground in the National Football League that way.

Even Pete Cawthorn's Brooklyn Dodgers, who get thrown for a loss of one-tenth of a yard every time they carry the ball through enemy lines, go to town with their aerials, although the real boys are the Washington Redskins (ever hear of Sammy Baugh,) and the Chicago Bears (they have Sid Luckman, you know).

The Redskins and Bears have gone nearly two lengths of the field via passes in each of their games so far. Washington's average is 195.5 yards a game and the Bears' is 191.5. Six other teams are averaging better than 100 yards while the Dodgers are close up with a 99.5 yard mark.

Five teams—the Bears, Washington, Brooklyn, Detroit and the Chicago Cardinals—have done substantially more traveling by means of passing than by running so far this season, and in 14 games the pros have scored 2.6 touchdowns each game through passing.

The champion Redskins' emphasis on passing in their two league games has boosted them to the front in total gains by both aerials and rushing, with an average of 365 yards. The Green Bay ground attack still is the circuit's best, being worth 177 yards a game.

On the defensive side the Redskins also show up well. They have held their opponents each game to 169 total yards and to 54.5 yards by rushing. The New York Giants throw up the best pass defense and have checked their foes each game to 92 yards.

The Chicago Bears, who have been penalized the most yards for the last three years, apparently aren't giving up their grip in that department this season. So far they've been set back 321 yards for alleged infractions in four games.

The leaders:

Total yards gained per game—Washington, 365; Chicago Bears, 346.5.

Yards rushing per game—Green Bay, 177; Phil-Pitt, 170.

Yards passing per game—Washington, 195.5; Chicago Bears, 191.5.

Per cent of passes completed—Washington, .527; Chicago Bears, .506.

Opponents' yards gained per game—Washington, 169; New York, 175.5.

Opponents' gains by rushing per game—Washington, 54.5; Phil-Pitt, 73.

Punting average—Chicago Cardinals, 41 yards; Detroit, 38.7 yards.

Md. Pimlico 'Take' $29,046 Daily

Annapolis, Oct. 20 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission notified Governor O'Conor today that the average daily take for the first eight days ended October 18 at the Pimlico race meet, was $29,046.

A total of $6,632,370 was bet by race track fans for the first eight days of the regular 30-day meeting while breakage amounted to $56,503.

Calumet Colt Beats Entry Of Greentree

Zanzibar Is Third; Four Freedoms Sets Early Pace But Runs Self to Submission

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 20.—Son of Peace, carrying the Devil's Red of the Calumet Farm, proved best of a group of nine seeking first money in today's $15,000 added Maryland-Potomac Handicap, a combination of handicaps previously contested at the Laurel and Havre de Grace tracks. Son of Peace, under good handling by Jockey B. Thompson, came to the imaginary wire two and a half lengths in front of the Greentree Stable's Famous Victory. Third money in the test of a mile and a furlong went to Lieut. A. G. Vanderbilt's Zanzibar.

Son of Peace, winner of his previous start here, was coupled with Nellie L. in the betting and returned a $3.50 mutuel. He was the fifth favorite to score in a row at this point of the program. He was clocked in 1.52 3-5, excellent time for the resurfaced track. A crowd of 13,000 saw the sport conducted under ideal conditions.

The Greentree Stable tried to use pacemaker and stretch run horses to account for the chief money. Four Freedoms, representing the Pink and Black, set the pace along with Bold Captain. However, Jockey Thompson refused to allow Son of Peace to run with this pair in the early stages.

Thompson Applied Pressure

Four Freedoms and Bold Captain finally ran themselves into submission and then Thompson began his move with the ultimate winner. Son of Peace went to the front entering the stretch. Then Famous Victory rallied on the outside and started after the leader. Thompson, however, placed Son of Peace to pressure and the Stimulus gelding responded to hold his advantage to the end.

The day's secondary feature, the Druid Hill Purse, also went to the Calumet Farm. This time Trainer Ben Jones entrusted the colors to Twilight Tear and Miss Keeneland and the two juvenile fillies dominating the running, finishing with speed in reserve and one, two in the test of a mile and 70 yards.

Head Finish in Seventh

The How Stable's Port Harmony, miserably handled in her previous race by Jockey Nick Wall, came back today and won the seventh race, a six-furlong sprint in a head finish with Piccadilly, owned by Mrs. Donald Woodward of Washington, D. C. An even-money flop last out, Port Harmony paid $9.10 today.

Jockey Johnny Breen goes into the best Army in the world tomorrow . . . Record Maker, a son of Time Maker, is one of the best-looking juveniles here . . . Carried Mrs. H. W. Boyle's colors into second position today . . . Thumbs Up, injured in last Saturday's Havre de Grace Handicap, is improved and appears a sure starter in the Pimlico Special . . . Bee Mac, the filly who broke down here, is putting her foot on the ground and more will be known of her injury when X-ray pictures are available this weekend . . . Today's steeplechase was named "The Shanno River," but it looked more like "The Ambulance" . . . This England, the winner, was purchased by Jock Whitney in England for $28,000 . . . Art Brown, the colt, is back in training after suffering from a cough . . . Walter Haight, the colt, ran away on the farm and was found three miles away trying to charge through a barbed-wire fence . . . He was cut up on the shoulders . . . Trainer Preston Burch of Washington has four eligibles for the Eastern Shore in his barn . . . They are Rodney Stone, Dance Team, Mrs. Ames and Professor Lee . . . Col. R. Bradley watched today's program from his auto.

Uline Scores D.C. Ring Body, Bans Boxing

dropped the case after several preliminary hearings.

In regard to "unreasonable demands for free tickets," Uline said the commission was angry with him because he objected to give the Commission so many choice seats gratis. In one case, Uline declared, Commissioner Morgan demanded and got 110 choice ringside seats, priced at $5. After that, Uline said he put his foot down and refused passes for other than immediate and personal demands, he said.

The Boxing Commission, which now has Inspector Clarence W. Talley as a member instead of Lieutenant Agnew, also proposed that Joe Turner be given a hand in boxing affairs at Uline Arena, Uline said. This he flatly refused, declaring he was well satisfied with Ahearn's promotions.

Uline denied boxing had been a lucrative source of income. He presented figures which showed his "take" from fight gates for the past two years had averaged only $521, despite a cut of approximately $2500 from the Henry Armstrong-Saverio Turiello fight last April which grossed slightly more than $19,000. One gate brought only $81 on a strict 10 percentage rental basis. Of late, he said, he has had to increase his "cut" to 15 per cent.

Uline said that even if the Boxing Commisston relented and permitted Ahearn to stage Monday night bouts that his arena could house them. Save for one open Monday night between now and January 3, he revealed, the arena is booked solidly on Mondays and declared definitely he would not be interested in staging fights on any other night of the week.

Goldie Ahearn, who has been promoting at Uline Arena for the past two years, last night expressed surprise at Uline's decision to abandon boxing after his next show, November 5. He said: "I am surprised. I don't know what to say. Naturally I haven't made any plans, for this is the first I heard of it. I expected to continue this winter at Uline Arena and have started negotiations for a return Dorazio-Hart fight, and have definite commitments from such fighters as "Turkey" Thompson, Sammy Angott, Fritzie Zivic, Bob Montgomery, Cleo Shans, Joe Baksi and, of course, Lew Hanbury, for matches this winter. It would be a shame if Washington missed seeing these fighters perform."

Claude W. Owen, chairman of the District Boxing Commission, last night would not express an opinion when informed of Uline's decision to ban boxing from his arena, but said it was a problem for the ring board which would have to be worked out, possibly by a compromise.

Owen said: "The Boxing Commission, in 1934 and 1935, would not permit another promoter to step in on Goldie Ahearn's regularly assigned Monday night dates. It has been our policy to protect the operator who has been promoting longest. In this case it is Joe Turner. However, it is to the best interests of boxing to keep both Turner and Ahearn in business. I don't know what can be done at this time, but possibly we can affect a compromise suitable to all at our next meeting Monday."

HAVE THE SITUATION WELL IN HAND

ALL OFFICIAL U. S. MARINE CORPS PHOTOS

The girls who wear the uniform of the U. S. Marine Corps are justly proud of the 168-year tradition of the Fighting Leathernecks. They don't have to be told to uphold the enviable reputation earned by their brothers-in-arms since 1775.

Having left their comfortable homes to share a squadroom with fifty roommates and learning many strange and hard tasks, the Women Marines have gained the respect and admiration of all who know their real worth.

In sixty-eight different types of jobs at thirty-seven posts or stations the Women Marines are contributing to our fighting by filling responsible jobs normally delegated to men.

They are now trained at Camp LeJeune . . . the great Marine Base at New River, N. C., where the fighting Marines are trained. Thus, they become familiar with all phases of Marine combat training, giving them a clearer idea of the importance of their own jobs and how necessary it is to release more men for combat duty.

Yes, the women of the Marine Corps have the situation well in hand. They are earnest, well-disciplined and efficient. And, they are true to the motto of their Corps . . . "Ever Faithful."

New Leave System To Be Adopted Soon

A new and far less expensive system of keeping leave records will be announced within a few days by the Civil Service Commission. In brief, the system will be decentralized and placed in the hands of Government supervisors. The scores of different leave slips—just about every bureau has its own peculiar slip—will be abolished. The employe will be able to go to his supervisor to find out how much sick or annual leave he has accumulated and he'll be abl to arrange time off by merely consulting with his chief. The plan is designed to cut out red tape and it should result in considerable economy if all the agencies follow it. It's estimated that it'll save several hundred thousand dollars and abolish the jobs of several hundred leave clerks.

KLUTTZ

And talking about red tape. a prize example of it was being shown to Justice Department employes yesterday. The specimen was sent back here by a former Justice employe who was in the thick of the recent fighting in Sicily. It was one of the small packs of toilet paper that had been issued to British tommies. On each sheet was printed: "For Government Use Only." The Justice employe said he was now convinced that red tape is something that isn't peculiar to this Government.

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Fleming is the proud father of twin boys . . . War Production Board has 822 dollar-a-year men . . . The influence of the five globe-flying Senators on international affairs has produced the first concrete result. The Senators brought back reports that the British international communications system was far more efficient than the several American companies. Now the Senate has voted to investigate and the commitee undoubtedly will propose a merger of our international radio and wireless concerns . . . Harry Hubbard of the Council of Personnel Administration is the new president of the Civil Service Assembly. He succeeds Ismar Baruch of the Civil Service Commission.

Ed Ford, assistant chief clerk of the Justice Department, had his Christmas fund containing about $100 in quarters stolen from his Chevy Chase home last week. His maid also disappeared the same day. Ed reported the incidents to the police, who apprehended the maid at a choir practice during last Friday's blackout. The police also found about $25 in quarters on the woman. In reporting the find to Ford, a policeman suggested that he come by the police station and pick up the money. Ed countered with the suggestion that he had better leave the money with the police so it could be used as evidence in the woman's trial.

"Oh, we don't want to keep the money in the station here," the policeman protested, "someone may steal it."

Frank Manuel, chief of the projects and analysis section in OPA's rent division, will report to the Army on November 2. He's the man who worked out the procedures that made rent control work. In fact, many believe more credit is due him than any other individual in keeping rents down. He'll be succeeded by Dr. Norton Long . . . PREDICTION: The Justice Department soon will investigate the fire insurance lobby which is trying to get Congress to exempt certain fire insurance companies from the antitrust act. A top Democratic political bigwig may be embarrassed by it.

Interstate Commerce Commission is another agency that's operating below its personnel ceilings. It has as much or more work than formerly but it can't hire good people. The Division of Motor Transports, for example, has a ceiling of 626 but it has only 547 employes. The administrative division has 692 employes. Its ceiling is 774 . . . Federal Trade Commission has reported to the Budget Bureau that the work in its legal division is being delayed because of the shortage of stenographers. On January 1, 1942, the commission had 14 stenos to serve the 205 attorneys. Now it has only 27 to assist 135 lawyers. It has asked for funds to hire 20 more stenos.

Commodity Credit Corp., which will be transferred to Foreign Economic Administration, has 1833 employes, 1530 in the field and 303 here . . . Federad Deposit Insurance Corp. has 1078 employes and a personnel ceiling of 1180 . . . The Solicitor of Agriculture has asked for funds to hire 36 new people for his staff . . . General Accounting Office is fast becoming one of the big agencies in Government. By January 1, Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren predicts he'll have a staff totaling 10,996 and the expansion won't stop there, as more field offices will be established . . . Business at Washington Airport is on the upgrade and it has asked the Commerce Department for 20 additional employes.

1400 Gas Co. Workers Denied Raise

S&W Cafe, Sears Employes Fare Better as Result Of Pleas to WLB

A 2 per cent wage increase proposed for 1400 employes of the Washington Gas and Light Co. and its subsidiaries was turned down yesterday by a 6 to 3 vote of the regional War Labor Board, with labor members dissenting.

The regional board, sitting in Philadelphia, found that "present rates paid this group of workers already compared favorably with the earnings of workers engaged in similar occupations in the area." The group had about exhausted the increase due under the WLB "Little Steel" formula, it was explained.

Raise for Cafeteria Workers

Simultaneously, the regional WLB announced its approval of new minimum rates for 200 employes of the S and W Cafeteria, 1425 G st. nw., providing increases ranging up to 13 cents an hour.

Meanwhile, the National War Labor Board authorized Sears, Roebuck & Co. to pay time and a half rates for overtime to supervisory employes in the mail order firm's retail stores. The adjustment will benefit supervisory employes in retail stores in the Washington area.

The gas company wage increase was requested jointly by the company and the following unions: District of Columbia Gas Workers Union, independent; Northern Virginia Gas Workers Union, Local 22607, AFL; and Washington Suburban Gas Co. Employes Association. The Washington Suburban Gas Co., Montgomery County, Md.; Rosslyn Gas Co., Rosslyn, Va.; and Prince George's Gas Corp., Prince Georges County, Md., also were affected.

Cost of Living Gauge

The proposed increase, under an "escalator" clause calling for stated increases with each rise in the cost of living, would have gone to all employes paid less than $300 a month. WLB has announced a policy of "terminating" escalator clauses which might operate to have an inflationary effect.

The S and W wage boost was requested jointly by the employer and the CIO United Cafeteria and Resaurant Workers. A minimum starting rate of 34 cents an hour to be increased to 40 cents an hour after 30 days' employment was established.

Typical new rates are: Chef, 84 cents an hour; first cooks, 66 cents; head dishwashers, 53 cents; counter girls, 40 cents; head baker, 84 cents, and assistant head baker, 70 cents. All adjustments are to be retroactive to June 24.

Ballou Is Retired, Haycock Named School Superintendent

Board Grants Request Made on Advice Of His Physician

By Margaret Davis
Post Staff Writer

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, for 23 years superintendent of Washington schools, was retired yesterday by the Board of Education at his own request, and Robert L. Haycock, who has been acting for Dr. Ballou during his recent months of illness, was sworn in as the new superintendent.

HAYCOCK

Dr. Ballou appeared himself before the board after acceptance of his request, made on the advice of his physician. The board approved his retirement with "deep regret."

He was present for the ceremony which raised Haycock to the position he took over in 1920.

Haycock's appointment was approved by the board upon a motion of Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, who said that the board was "fortunate to have a man who has served it for nearly 50 years to carry on in this time of unrest."

Haycock Near Retirement Age

Haycock is now 67 years old and will be ready for compulsory retirement by law because of age when he reaches 70, unless the board should vote by a two-thirds majority that he be retained longer for the good of the service.

Dr. Ballou was retired under optional retirement provisions for school teachers and officers, which allow such personnel to be retired at the age of 62 or thereafter and still receive retirement benefits.

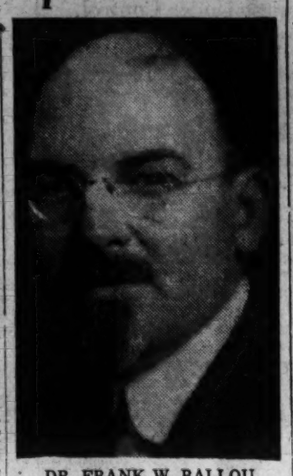
Acknowledging Dr. Ballau's withdrawal, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, expressed that body's appreciation of his record.

She said: "We can survey with pride and admiration the solid evidence of work well done . . . splending building with modern equipment . . . an efficient organization of 4000 men and women devoted to the education of the children of this city."

As an "able pleader before Congress, efficient administrator of a large and complex municipal school system, and educational leader of teachers and pupils," she said, "he leaves to the public schools of Washington the fruits of his labor."

Outlining Haycock's record of service in the schools ranging from elementary teacher 48 years ago to first assistant superintendent of schools since 1935, Mrs. Doyle said, "Balanced judgment, quiet efficiency, and devotion to his chosen profession have characterized Mr. Haycock's services."

Doctor Ballou and Mr. Haycock both made acknowledging statements, and Doctor Ballou left the meeting after first shaking the hand of each board member.



DR. FRANK W. BALLOU

Doctor Ballou succeeded Ernest L. Thurston as superintendent of Washington's schools in July, 1920. He had previously been superintendent of schools in Boston.

A graduate of the New York State Normal School in 1902, he received subsequently a B. S. from Columbia University Teachers College, an M. A. from the University of Cincinnati, and a Ph. D. at Harvard University.

Throughout his career in Washington, he fought for greater facilities to give Washington's school children "more education of the right kind," as he said. More than 60 new buildings were erected during his years of service.

He worked for more counseling and training for a livelihood in the schools, and contended that occupational programs for students should not be considered only in terms of work benches.

Character education was another of his programs incorporated into the schools. He encouraged increased physical training.

He saw enrollment grow from 65,000 to 90,000 under his direction and school annual appropriations nearly quadrupled.

Haycock, a native of the city, entered the schools as an elementray student. He received his first school appointment as an elementary teacher in 1895, upon completion of Washington Normal's one-year course. He subsequently received his A. B. and M. A. from George Washington University.

He served as Industrial Home School principal for 12 years, later as supervising principal of the Mount Pleasant section, and in 1923 was appointed an assistant superintendent.

He became first assistant superintendent of schools in 1935, retaining administrative and supervisory responsibility over white elementary schools. He also was in charge of nursery school and adult education projects under the emergency education program.

Planned Bill Ends Muddle Of Boundary

Randolph Expects To Have Measure Soon to Fix D. C. Line At High-Water Mark

A bill giving promise of settling once and for all the much-disputed boundary question between the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Virginia will be introduced in the House within a few days by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, The Post learned last night.

The bill proposes to fix the present mean high water line on the Virginia shore of the Potomac River as the boundary line between the District and Virginia, with the qualification that whenever the location of the pierhead line along the Alexandria waterfront is altered, the boundary will follow the new pierhead line.

Under the measure Virginia receives all of the territory situated on the Virginia side of the Potomac River and lying between the above-described boundary line and the mean high water line as it existed on January 24, 1791.

Concurrent Jurisdiction

The United States, however, reserves concurrent jurisdiction over this area. This provision, together with prior concurrent jurisdiction yielded previously by Virginia, will give the Federal Government concurrent jurisdiction over the George Washington Memorial Highway, the National Airport and the Pentagon Building and its surroundings.

This would mean that the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia would have legal jurisdiction over this area.

The bill, one of a long series attempting to solve the boundary question, is not expected to be fought by Virginia representatives.

It is backed by Attorney General Biddle and by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Law Inforcement Important

In a letter to Randolph urging the necessity of the bill, the Attorney General said:

"It is of the highest importance, from the standpoint of the enforcement of the criminal law, that a definite decision be reached in regard to this matter, since at present the enforcement of the criminal law is hampered, and at times even frustrated, by reason of the uncertainty as to what courts have jurisdiction over criminal offenses committed within the disputed area.

"As the difficulty was accentuated some years ago by the construction of a new highway to Mount Vernon and, more recently by the erection and operation of the new airport, it is exceedingly important that there be a definite determination placing the land in question either in the District of Columbia or in the Commonwealth of Virginia. Whether these areas be placed in one jurisdiction or the other is a matter of subordinate significance."

Applicants for Ration Book 4 To Register Today, Tomorrow

Students in the District, and Montgomery, Arlington and Prince Georges County public schools will have a holiday today and tomorrow while their parents or other adult members of their families line up in the old classrooms to register for War Ration Book Four.

All persons in Washington whose names begin with the letters A to J must register between 7 a.m. and 9 p. m. today at the public schools most convenient to their homes or offices. Tomorrow, at the same hours, is reserved for the rest of the alphabet, K through Z.

In Arlington registration hours are 9:30 a. m. through 9 p. m. But in both Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties the schools will be open 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. and 4 to 8 p. m. Alphabetical divisions, however, do not apply to registrants in these counties.

Registration, which will be taken by school teachers relieved for the purpose from classroom activities, will be considerably simplified, with the name, age, address and sex of the applicant and members of his family all that will be required. Each applicant, however, must have with him War Ration Book Three, or must apply for that at his local War Price and Rationing Board before he can receive the new food allotment book.

Washingtonians who fail to register today and tomorrow, will be forced to wait until November 1, when their local boards will issue Book Four under the same procedure outlined above. Book Three is required in this instance, too.

Man, Aged 71, Fatally Hurt By Streetcar

Herman Evans, 71-year-old Negro, of no known address, according to police, was fatally injured last night when struck by a southbound streetcar at 14th and Swann sts. nw. His death raised to 27 the total of those more than 60 years old killed while walking and to 47 the number of pedestrians of all ages killed.

Police said the operator of the streetcar was George H. LeCarpentier, 30, of 1447 Columbia rd. nw., and that he had three years' experience as a motorman. The aged man, police said, was struck while he was walking across the street. He died in Emergency Hospital at 11:45 p. m.

Earlier in the day, John Lewis Graumann, 24, of 1013 Debeck dr., Rockcrest, Rockville, Md., was exonerated by a coroner's jury in the death of Madame Gabrielle Heurdier, 68, of 956 F st. sw., who was killed Friday when she was struck at 16th and Oak sts. nw., by a car owned and operated by Graumann. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. She was on her way to the Mexican Embassy when struck.

Traffic in all directions was tied up for more than 30 minutes late yesterday afternoon at 3rd st. and Mass. ave., following the collision of a west-bound streetcar, operated by Andrew J. Neal, of 1624 Minn. ave. se., and a huge south-bound trailer truck, owned by Blue Ridge Transfer Co., and driven by Warren Smith, 26, of Galax, Va. A few passengers were shaken up, but otherwise uninjured.

Citizens Urge Wider Probe At Gallinger

A resolution seeking more complete congressional investigation of conditions at Gallinger Hospital was unanimously approved at a meeting of the Southwest Citizens Association last night. Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, presented the resolution for the executive committee.

Reelected president of the group was the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church. Other officers elected were Robert D. Marshall, vice president; Miss Josephine Conrad, secretary, and Mrs. Myrtle Mothershead, treasurer.

Wender and Walter Blount were chosen delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Wender was also appointed chairman of the Southwest's executive committee. Francis Hart was named chairman of the recreation committee, and Mrs. Pearl Lohman, chairman of the membership committee.

Asserting that the black market will be defeated by patriotic citizens, Robert K. Thompson, director of the District OPA, told the association that the success of his office's work depends upon community cooperation.

Mason Commended

Commending Commissioner Guy Mason for refusing to testify in the Gallinger Hospital investigation pending a report from the United States attorney's office, Lincoln Civic Association last night termed him "one of the fairest officers we have had."

The association disapproved the McCarran District government bill as such, but proposed election of a mayor, instead of a city manager, and a city council to represent wards outlined by the police precincts. National representation and the privilege to vote for President and Vice President also were recommended.

A brief was ordered submitted to the Senate District Subcommittee on Housing asking abolishment of the immigrant regulation as regards war housing. Instead, the association proposed that District residents be given priority on the new housing. "They take our homes and leave us outdoors," President E. F. Harris said last night.

Friendship Citizens

The Filipinos have an unbounded confidence in General MacArthur, who spent so much of his life with them, and firmly expect his return, S. Ugarte, legal adviser to the Resident Commissioner of the Philippines said last night. He addressed members of the Friendship Citizens Association on "The Philippines in Relation to the War Situation."

The association adopted a resolution indorsing conversion of 52 streetcars to one man operation as a war emergency and reported on the near completion of reinforcements to a bridge in Rock Creek Park to speed crosstown bus service.

W. B. Bees was elected treasurer of the association, Mrs. Ruth Venier, secretary, and Guy H. Birdsall and Hiram W. Hummer were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Comdr. Harry Hull Gets Navy Cross For War Heroism

Lieut. Comdr. Harry Hull of Washington and Chevy Chase, Md., was one of four submarine skippers to receive the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" in operations that resulted in the sinking or damaging of "many thousands of tons of enemy shipping," Pacific fleet headquarters announced yesterday.

COMDR. HULL

A native of Athens, Ga., Hull attended Friends School here and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1932.

While his submarine was undergoing repairs last August he returned here to marry Miss Louisa Catherine Adams Clement, daughter of Mrs. Donald Cameron Bingham of 313 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase. He is the son of Mrs. Charles T. Phillips of 2153 California st. nw.

Windsor Turns Up At Canadian Legion Club Celebration

Running practiced eyes over battle ribbons on chests of British veterans and recalling exploits that made their regiments famous; stopping for quick, animated chats with girls of the Auxiliary Territorial Services, Edward, the Duke of Windsor, was the "hit of the evening" at a celebration of the first year in its clubhouse of Canadian Legion Post, No. 147, at 1557 N st., last night.

That the Duke has lost none of the charm that has made him famous was evident in the breathless comment of the misses present.

The Duke informally met members of such famed British regiments as the Royal Dragoons, the Black Watch, Welsh Guards, King's Own Scottish Borderers, the Honorable Artillery Company and the Prince Albert's Somerset.

News of the visit spread through the 17th and N sts. section, and several hundreds gathered for a glimpse of the Duke.

Mason Asks 2 Assistants For Bocock

Offers Results of Two-Year Study to Correct Gallinger Hospital Troubles

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

District Commissioners and officials of the Health Department are expected today to approve a new plan to correct conditions at Gallinger Municipal Hospital which was proposed yesterday by Commissioner Guy Mason.

Mason said his proposal came after a two-year study of the problem and was not the result of the recent Senate investigation of Gallinger which brought forth a request for his removal from office as well as the removal of four others.

The Mason program does not detail any immediate change in personnel. He said no action along this line would be taken until after District Attorney Edward M. Curran finishes his investigation of Gallinger affairs and the report of the General Accounting Office is completed.

Asks Two Assistants

Chief among the proposals was the appointment of two assistant superintendents, whose salaries would be paid by a deficiency appropriation which would be requested immediately.

Mason said that one assistant should be either a physician or an engineer and have complete charge of hospital personnel. The other assistant would be an engineer and not a physician and would have full charge of all property, including buildings and heating plants.

Mason pointed out that the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., with only 600 beds, had three assistant superintendents, and that Walter Reed and the Cornell (N. Y.) Hospitals had similar setups. He said that last year Congress had been asked to appropriate funds for one assistant superintendent and although it was approved by the Budget Bureau the house deleted the item.

Too Big a Job

"Gallinger Hospital, with 1400 beds, is simply too big a job for any one man to handle. Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger, has done the best he can under the circumstances but he needs the help of qualified assistants," Mason said.

The Mason proposal provides for the medical services to continue as now under the direction of a visiting staff with Admiral P. S. Rossiter, formerly chief surgeon of the Navy, as its chief.

"By retaining him and the rest of the staff we get the services of all these fine doctors without cost to the city," he said.

Board of Survey

He also recommended a permanent board of survey be appointed to be composed of three staff physicians who would examine every person who had been in the hospital two months or more. This board would determine if the patient should be dismissed, stay where he is or be transferred to another department.

"No patient will be transferred from any other department to the psychopathic ward without the approval of this board which will not contain more than one psychiatrist. The same physicians need not always compose the board, but after their first survey they will continue to examine the patient, giving him a complete physical test," he said.

Regular Visits

The third proposal was that the health officer, or his assistant, visit each of the District-operated hospitals at least once every three weeks for a complete checkup on their operation. Besides Gallinger there are the District Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md., and the Upshur Street Convalescent Hospital.

Fourth, he recommended that pending the time when building materials can be secured for permanent structures a temporary building be built to house the laundry and that the present laundry building be used to enlarge kitchen facilities.

Thanks Subcommittee

Mason thanked the special Senate subcommittee for its help in bringing the need for improvement of conditions at Gallinger to light.

He said he had discussed the problem with United States Public Health physicians, and with Rear Admiral H. O. Bunker, commanding officer of the Naval Hospital, as well as various other hospital authorities and had made several trips to hospitals in other sections of the country to study the problem first-hand.

The Commissioners and officials of the Health Department and Gallinger are expected to approve the program today and then to immediately ask for the deficiency appropriation.

Besides the Commissioners, those who will attend the meeting today at 10 a. m. are Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, Doctor Bocock, and Walter L. Fowler, budget officer.

Two Will Get Degrees

Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, USN, chief of naval personnel, and Capt. William Wohlsen Behrens, USN, officer in charge of the Administration Training Division, Navy Department, will receive the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., at commencement exercises October 31. Dr. Theodore A. Distler, president, announced yesterday.

Longer Yule Holiday Asked For Schools

A longer Christmas holiday which would permit older District school children to take rush season jobs, while saving fuel, oil and electricity in local school buildings, was proposed yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Education.

Suggested by a Postoffice Department request for 1000 boys and 600 girls for fulltime work during the preholiday rush, the proposal to close the schools four days before Christmas was referred to a special committee. Board action is expected the first week in November.

To offset the extra recess, it was also proposed that the schools remain open four days of the Easter holiday.

Under board-approved measures of facilitate issuance of teachers' checks, the office of business affairs will develop two general payrolls. One would carry names of teachers to be paid as regularly as possible on the second day of each month. The second roll would be supplemental, bearing names of teachers (usually temporary or newly appointed) to be paid on a later date—possibly the 10th.

The board approved the following additional key positions in the schools for selective service deferment: principles of vocational schools and high schools where vocational and technical education are major parts of the school curricula, and teachers of chemistry, physics and mathematics.

Needy of All Ages Helped By War Fund

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

From infancy to old age, Washington's destitute are being cared for by dollars given in "brotherhood" to the Community War Fund.

For their future welfare, the fund this month is seeking $$4,800,000 for 145 agencies, where the appeals of needy of all ages are heard and answered.

The helpless baby, the grade school youngster, the growing adolescent, the matured serviceman or woman, the aging infirm—the support of all these is dependent upon public support of the Community War Fund.

Some of those dollars will go to the Florence Crittenton Home, where shelter and care are temporarily provided for unmarried mothers and, permanently if necessary, for their children. Fund gifts make possible medical supervision, play space and equipment and daycare for these newborn babies. Similar provisions for the very young, whose families have been broken up or who never had homes, are made at St. Ann's Infant Asylum and Washington Home for Foundlings.

"Second" homes for school-age youngsters whose families must devote much of their time to war jobs, or whose fathers have gone into uniform, are made possible by fund contributions.

Curbing juvenile delinquency as they offer wholesome recreation are Barney Neighborhood House, Boys' Club of Washington, Christ Child Settlement House, Georgetown Children's House, Juanita Kaufman Nye Council House, Northwest Settlement House and Southwest Community House.

Out of Washington's $4,800,000 fund goal will go $1,158,805 to the USO and other war hospitality services—enough money to assure lodging, entertainment and recreation for the boys in uniform, in rapidly growing service clubs throughout the city.

A home in every sense of the word is found by indigent men and women of Jewish faith who are more than 65 years old in the Hebrew Home for the Aged. For elderly Negro women, there is St. Anna's Home, while both Negro men and women who have no other means of support are cared for at the Stoddard Baptist Home.

Science Group Meets

Metropole Bar Suspension Restrained

Attorneys for the Metropole Bar and Grill, Inc., mailed an injunction order to the Corporation Counsel's office yesterday after Justice Jennings Bailey of District Court said he would grant the order temporarily restraining the District Commissioners from suspending the license of the restaurant.

Attorneys George Papanicolas, E. Hilton Jackson and John Jackson informed the court that Harry Xeron, operator of the Metropole had cleaned up the restaurant at a cost of $6700 before the Board of Licenses held its hearings in September which ended in an order to suspend the restaurant license from October 10 to October 31.

The court was also told the Corporation Counsel's office had advised Xeron that he would have no trouble renewing his license for the coming year when he applies on November 1. This was not denied by the Corporation Counsel's office.

The Metropole, which was accused of several violations of the sanitation code, sued for temporary and permanent injunctions against the commissioners. It is contended that the Commissioners by their action violated the "due process of law" clause of the Constitution, held its hearings without regard for legal procedure, and that the suspension order was illegal in that it was not based on findings of fact.

The court is scheduled to hear the case on its merits at a later date.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed for 13 Years to Acknowledged Alcoholic, Who Recently Brought His Thirst Under Control, Woman Thinks Our Advice to "J. M." Was Faulty.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem discussed in your column last Friday is one toward the solution of which I have necessarily devoted much thought. In a letter signed "J. M.," a mother of two children tells you that her second marriage to a "consistent drinker" has cost her heavily in peace of mind. Her husband is now at war, and she says she never wants to go back to "the kind of life we had together before he went away." She asks advice on "just what to do," so that she can make her adjustments before he returns. The gist (as I got it) of your advice to "J. M." was to put her children's welfare first; by being strong enough to live permanently apart from her husband, or take any other step necessary to protect those children against "demoralizing home influences," the like of which their stepfather no doubt experienced in his childhood, so you say.

It seems evident from "J. M.'s" letter that if alcoholism were removed from her domestic scene, a happy family life would result; for she says her husband is likable and lovable when not drinking to excess; that he is a good provider and always good to the children; and that the children liked him and miss him now. Consequently, I believe helpful advice should be directed at relieving his alcoholism, which is the sole blight on their happiness. I have been married for 13 years to an acknowledged alcoholic. I say "acknowledged," because a few years ago he heard of and joined an organization called "Alcoholics Anonymous,"—of which you, apparently, have not heard. This group has an amazing record of helping professed alcoholics lead sober successful lives. "Alcoholics Anonymous" helps these people through group therapy; and by teaching them to place dependence in a Higher Power. While it does not claim to "cure" alcoholism (for which there is no cure), its followers are enabled to forego drinking completely, with the result that the vices and unhappiness attendant on drinking have been eliminated in thousands of cases.

Home Is Tranquil Since He Reformed

I offer this testimony from personal experience. Before the introduction of this "philosophy" into our home, we had many unhappy times; but they were all caused by my husband's drinking. Since he joined the group, we have known great domestic tranquillity, because (as is true of most alcoholics), he had no other faults except alcoholism and those faults attendant on it. I feel that "J. M.'s" husband is worth helping,—if he wants help. She should be given hope, by knowing about this group. After all, a man who marries a widow with two children is not without courage. Furthermore, a day will come when those children are grown; and married, with their own lives to lead. Then she will need and be grateful for the love and companionship which the younger generation is too busy to give her.

I have one other comment to make on your answer to her. That is a criticism of your strongly-worded statement that she should not subject her children to the demoralizing influence of an alcoholic parent. The weight of evidence is to the effect that early home environment has no relationship to alcoholism in adults. I have known more than a few alcoholics who had been reared in beautiful homes, full of love, sympathy and understanding. And conversely, I have known some very wonderful people whose early environment was alcoholic. Most informed persons will agree that alcoholism is an incurable disease, just as diabetes and many other diseases,—both physical and psychological,—are. Therefore, I say: Let us advise "J. M." not to worry about her children, more than to give them healthy bodies, a right set of values and personal integrity. Let her rather give thought to helping her husband, who desperately needs help and wants her love. Give him understanding. I think she will be able to do this in some measure after she has read the book, "Alcoholics Anonymous." Sincerely, E. M. M.

Objection Contains Three Major Errors

DEAR E. M. M.: Your letter seems worthy of publication because (1) it is so sincerely offered; and (2) because there is a chance it may supply information to "J. M." that will result in her husband's rehabilitation. However, much of your comment is off the beam. For instance, you are greatly in error in supposing I have not heard of Alcoholics Anonymous. As a matter of fact, this column pioneered in publicizing the debut of the Washington branch, which has been in existence at least five years, as I recollect. Also, as leaders of the group well know, this column has been a quiet booster of its work ever since,—frequently mentioning its program in this space, and just as frequently dealing by telephone with persons who turn here to locate the local chapter's club rooms. The work of Alcoholics Anonymous was being favorably discussed in this column at a time, years back, when the national membership was only about 200, as compared to the membership of thousands it has today; and long before such periodicals as Liberty Magazine and The Saturday Evening Post had seen fit to treat it seriously, in illuminating articles,—as they subsequently did.

And while we are on the subject of Alcoholics Anonymous, perhaps I should mention (as I have so often) that the local club rooms are at 1401 Fourteenth Street Northwest, third floor, telephone ADams 9562. The group meets regularly three times a week, on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, though the club rooms are open daily to members and new candidates. Here is the schedule of meetings: Tuesdays, 8:30 p. m., membership meeting. Thursdays, 8:30 p. m., fellowship meeting, to which relatives and friends of members are welcomed. Sunday evenings, 6:30 o'clock, "open house," with buffet supper, bridge, etc., regularly attended by members, friends and relatives. So, if "J. M." wishes to investigate the possibilities of group help with her husband's problem, and pave the way to membership for him on his return,—there is the "where" and "when" to go.

Drinking Is Symptom Of Undefined Disorder

Your second misstatement is: "The weight of evidence is to the effect that early home environment has no relationship to alcoholism in adults." Your third: "Most informed persons will agree that alcoholism is an incurable disease—." The best scientific thought in regard to alcoholism is that it is NOT a disease, but a symptom. However, the best thought is divided, in pursuing scientific speculation as to what the alcoholic's symptomatic behavior signifies. We have much psycho-analytic evidence and some successful treatment of alcoholics by psychiatric methods, to strongly indicate that the alcoholic's problem is basically psychic; and that he drinks to drown out (to find temporary surcease from) obscure but torturing inner anxieties, and to give himself an intoxicated false sense of courage, well being, etc. From the viewpoint of psychiatric diagnosis, there seems to be a direct relationship between alcoholism and a history of childhood experience which makes for excessively dependent, anxious, unstable temperament,—whether that experience be drawn from an overtly beautiful family life, or one full of trial and tribulation. And the fact that Alcoholics Anonymous gets results with alcoholics, by employing the "group therapy" not only of strongly-supporting sympathetic human fellowship but also of sincere dependence upon a proved Higher Power, lends weight to the theory that the alcoholic's basic problem is one of urgent subconscious anxiety,—because, when embraced in "the everlasting arms" by the techniques aforementioned, the alcoholic is able to control his craving for anesthetic drink. The second school of thought in re alcoholism,—still in the early stages of exploration,—is that this frenzied, abnormal thirst may reflect an extreme degree of physical need, on the part of the sufferer, for some mysterious element of bodily chemistry or sustenance, essential to nervous balance, which science has not yet "caught up with" and defined. WOMEN'S CLUB NEWS

By Genevieve Reynolds

Have a yen to write children's stories? If so, don't give them a war setting. Magazine editors are buying only those dealing with the post-war world. So revealed versatile Francesca Falk Miller, member of the national board, National League of American Pen Women.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In town recently from her home in Chicago, the candidate for the Pen League's presidency said that three types of writing are needed for Post War America; realistic stories based on clean living for children (no more Elsie Dinsmore's); for women returning from industry—a little adventure for them—and for returning soldiers. "We must have a balanced country for the returning soldiers," she declared.

Author of six books—five of poetry and one biography, Mrs. Miller won the Lincoln Contest of $1000 for her story, "Lincoln in Indiana." An accomplished musician, the Chicago-born and bred woman has written music for Charles Wakefield Cadman and Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Blonde, gracious Mrs. Miller started out to be an artist, then up popped a scholarship to the Chicago Musical College and she switched to opera. After singing for 15 years she turned to poetry and drama.

MRS. MILLER

At present she is too engrossed in war work to do much writing. A member of the board of directors of the Women's Defense Corps of America, she's busy with war-work. This woman's organization sports military uniforms and observes military discipline in its volunteer work. In Chicago alone there are over 12,000 members. Members aid in canteens, assist in bond drives, solicit cigarettes for the Yanks, give parties for wounded sailors and soldiers. In addition, the members do Red Cross work and numerous other war activities. Mrs. Miller herself collected more than 40,000 cigarettes for the soldiers.

Active in many organizations, Mrs. Miller served on the national board of the Daughters of 1812; was music chairman for the Illinois State DAR. Her offices in the League of American Pen Women are too numerous to mention. Suffice it to say, she is a leader in the national as well as State organization.

"Yes, quite Continental. I see so many members of the international set."

"Yes, and the expatriate and foreign refugee sets."

"And the Embassy set."

"And there's quite a smattering of the conservative set."

"Yes, and the New York set."

"And the literary and artistic sets."

"And I see simply scads of members of the stork set."

"Isn't Fifi Slinker most attractive?"

"Yes, I understand she assembles her own smart costumes."

"Look at Sonia Luker over there flaunting her sun tan."

"Yes, she said she'd just dashed in from Miami."

"What ever became of Celeste Luker?"

"I understand her marriage ended in headlines."

"Hasn't Bea Elderberry a fresh outdoor look?"

"Well, of course, she's an indefatigable bicyclist."

"I see Mrs. R. Skiddy de Muchmore over there chatting with friends."

"Yes, she's making one of her rare appearances."

"I thought she was eschewing society for the duration."

"She is—except for infrequent bridge parties and quiet, exclusive little dinners."

"What's become of Mrs. Stuveysant Mixmaster?"

"I understand she reluctantly gave up her war duties to rest."

"There's Suzanne Rhumba in a very smart pre-war ensemble."

"Did you know that her intimates think she's engaged to Dickie Ditherton?"

"Yes, but I understand she has no immediate wedding plans to announce—at least not until she secures her divorce."

"Shall we go into the dining room?"

"Perhaps—no, wait. There's a milling mob about the table."

"The dining room is always a popular gathering place, isn't it?"

The Homebody

(An Interview)

"Mrs. Antelope, I understand you are doing a great many interesting things in war and civic work."

"I'm just trying to do my bit. Of course my home always comes first."

"What is your main activity?"

"I have several—which are completely subordinate to my home and family, of course."

"What are they?"

"Well, I work three nights a week at the Admirals' and Generals' Canteen. Then four afternoons I drill with the Ladies' Parachute Patrol. Then four mornings a week I attend a class in coordinating women's activities."

"That's a rather strenuous schedule."

"Yes, but I never let any of these things interfere with my homemaking duties. They come first."

"Do you have any other public activities?"

"Oh, yes, I work two afternoons a week at the Hoarders' Exchange, where out-of-date clothes are sold to the underprivileged at a discount. Then I frequently go on tours of inspection."

"What kind of inspection?"

"Oh, just inspection of things."

"What things?"

"Oh, things that need to be inspected. But, of course, I don't let this interfere with my homemaking."

"Any other activities, Mrs. Antelope?"

"Yes, I am chairman of benefits for the Milk Fund for Non-Hottentot Children, and director of vegetable garden tours for the Ladies Walden Pond League, and a member of the Advisory Board of the Association for Advancement and director of public relations for the League to Improve American Coiffures and national organizer for the Herb Tea Society and—"

"Just a minute, Mrs. Antelope. That will be enough for the present."

"All right, but please make it definite in your article that my home comes first—that I am preeminently a wife and a mother."

TEAS VANILLA SPICES

For Women Who Work

By Ruth Gregory

We're not talking about the women in welder's outfits or the women in uniform. We're talking about the thousands of women who've never received any E's or service medals—the housewives, office workers and students, who are quietly doing their part.

They wear a kind of uniform, too. There's nothing glamorous or headline-making about these garments. The smock, the apron, the wrap-around have been worn for years. But this year more women than ever are wearing them. They're practical, comfortable garments that'll save wear and tear on your good clothes, all of them are many-purposed.

Gay Smocks:

This bright India print smock is only one of the varied patterns you'll find in this particular department. Prints, polka-dots, stripes, checks in different kinds of cotton and rayon weaves, three-quarter and full-length ones, and prices ranging from around $2 up to about $9—that's what you'll have to pick from if it's a smock you need for kitchen work, for gardening, carpentry, or whatever. The one sketched here, sizes 12-18, is just under $4.

Chore-All:

This blue denim wrap-around with its huge patchpockets is a beauty for any woman who works in a laboratory, who makes with the broom and mop, who really goes in for heavy work. Lots of schoolgirls have found this type of garment the perfect answer for choring around the dormitory, for wearing in science labs. It's just under $8.

Donkey Apron:

We don't know why it's called that—you can be sure it has no relation to the wearer of the same. We suspect it's because, like a donkey, this apron will take care of a lot of burdens.

It's made of medium-wale corduroy and comes in bright red, wine and green (around $6). Has big catchall pockets that'll hold an infinite number of things.

For further information please call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Now that it no longer is possible to drive the children to and from school at noon, those who live at a distance must take their lunches. This lunch is an important meal to the child who has an aversion to breakfasts or eats a hasty and inadequate one. Lunches, then, must be hearty and well balanced.

There should always be a selection of some kind of protein food to fulfill that description of "heartiness." This probably will be sandwiches with a filling of egg, meat or cheese. If vegetables are used (and they are nice if made of raw, chopped vegetables mixed with salad dressing), then let a hard-cooked egg or a wedge of cheese provide the protein.

Because sandwiches can become dry and stale when kept for so many hours in a hot room, a tin box, rather than a paper bag, is necessary as a lunch box. In addition, add the salad dressing with a liberal hand and provide plenty of waxed paper around each individual item of the lunch so it will keep its tasty qualities intact.

Everyone is familiar with the usual components of the lunch box, sandwiches, pickles, hard-cooked egg, a ripe tomato—if one is to be had—a piece of fruit and a cookie, doughnut or a slice of cake.

But any teacher can affirm that the average lunch box contains no such wholesome assortment. Any old left-overs, however unappetizing, fill the lunch boxes and eventually the waste baskets in the schoolroom.

Changes can be wrung on these standbys if one can find a nice, wide-mouthed glass jar with a screw lid and fill this with fruit or vegetable salad or baked beans. The thermos bottle which accompanies most tin lunch boxes can serve to carry hot soups and thus vary the monotony of a cold meal on a cold day.

Our leaflet, "Meals for the School Child," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Martha Ellyn

You may not have the insatiable desire of Jiggs for corned beef and cabbage, but that doesn't mean that it isn't a dish worthy of attention. You can corn the beef yourself or buy it already corned.

Corned brisket, rump, plate or round are all good buys. And this is a versatile dish, too, for it takes to cabbage or horseradish in an admirable way. Cornmeal dumplings cooked in the corned beef stock is also a variation you will like. Green tomatoes, which seem to be every place these days, on the vine and in the market, also go splendidly with corned beef.

Let's consider corned beef with green tomatoes for a dinner menu. This will be a meal for one of these nippy days when appetites have been whetted by work and chilly breezes.

Dinner Menu

Corned Beef Cauliflower
Fried Green Tomatoes
Waldorf Salad Hot Rolls
Chocolate Bavarian Beverage

The following is a recipe for cooking the corned beef already processed. But you can corn your own beef if you have the time for processing it.

CORNED BEEF

Wipe with a damp cloth and tie to keep it in shape, a 5-pound piece of corned beef. Place it in cold water to cover. Add ½ clove of garlic and 6 peppercorns. Bring it to the boiling point, remove the scum, reduce the heat, cover the pot and simmer the meat for about 5 hours, or until it is tender. Leave the meat in the water in which it was cooked until it is lukewarm. Remove it and press it with a weight, or serve it warm and unpressed. Horseradish sauce goes fine with this meat.

If you want to turn your dinner into a New England boiled dinner then follow the above directions for cooking the meat, only cook it for 4 hours, then remove from the pot. Peel, quarter and simmer in the stock for 30 minutes 6 carrots, 3 large yellow turnips and 8 small skinned onions. Peel, quarter and simmer in the stock for 15 minutes longer 6 medium-sized potatoes. Cut into wedges, add and simmer until tender, 10 to 15 minutes, a head of cabbage. Reheat the meat in the stock. Serve it on a platter surrounded by the vegetables.

Perhaps you will like to try the corn meal dumplings cooked in the corned beef stock. If so, have simmering 5 or 6 cups corned beef stock and drop the dumplings into it made in the following way:

CORN MEAL DUMPLINGS

Sift together 1 cup corn meal, ¼ cup bread flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Beat 1 egg, add ½ cup milk. Combine the egg mixture with the dry ingredients. Stir in 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine. Drop the batter by the spoonfuls into the hot stock. Cover the pan closely. Simmer the dumplings for 15 minutes. Remove them at once from the liquor and serve immediately.

Corned beef and cabbage may be soul mates but there are other vegetables which are equally as delicious when served with this meat. Here's a presentation of corned beef, cauliflower and sauted green tomatoes which is something to smack the lips about

Market Report

With the end of the Eastern tomato season nearing, the War Food Administration reports that supplies from New York, Pennsylvania and California continue as one of the best food buys. They're good in quality and low in price.

Cauliflower is now moderately priced, but grapefruit continues light. Four carloads of bananas were received yesterday, while fresh figs make their initial appearance on the market.

Plentiful—White potatoes, sweet potatoes, squash, tomatoes, spinach, kale, collards, turnip greens, mustard greens, turnips, rutabaga, onions, green beans, peppers, limes, lemons, Western grapes, cauliflower and beets.

Moderate—Cabbage, carrots, parsnips, parsley, lettuce, broccoli, mushrooms, celery, avocados, apples and honeydew melons.

Light—Cranberries, cucumbers, lima beans, salsify, garlic, Brussels sprouts, eggplant, green onions, artichokes, escarole, chicory, radishes, okra, pumpkins.

Room and Bath Please? Is Idle Plea Elsewhere

Mrs. Newman H. Clark, Navy Wife, Finds Manhattan Hotel Conditions in Sad State

By Peggy Preston

Remember a year ago when Washington residents flocked to New York for weekends, seeking respite from the Capital's "crowded conditions?"

Well, that was a year ago. Today these same travelers have a different story to tell, one of a hotel and housing situation that rivals the Washington saga at its worst.

One such story comes from Mrs. Newman H. Clark, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Clark, USNR, who is just back in town after a brief sojourn in Manhattan.

"I made a hotel reservation one week in advance," she relates. "And, even so, had to wait all day in the lobby until the room was vacated. But I wasn't alone. There were 75 hopefuls in the baggage room waiting for word from the front desk as to whether or not they could have accomodations that night."

Service People Make Up Clientele

Mrs. Clark, who has traveled with her Navy husband from one station to another in the past year, was unprepared for New York hotel conditions. A former reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle and of an inquiring turn of mind, she has sought an answer to the situation.

"According to an American Hotel Association estimate, more than 85 per cent of the hotel population today is made up of service people and their families," she explains. "And New York is a special mecca for this type of clientele. It is surrounded by service camps; honeymooners flock there; men on leave from all parts of the country seek it out, and, of course, family reunions are in order all over town. All in all it is making for a rush for hotel rooms that surpasses any I've seen yet."

Found House in Washington

And Mrs. Clark has seen all she wants to see of hotel rooms and temporary living quarters. She has had a typical "Navy wife" existence since her marriage a year ago. First she and her husband lived in a hotel room in Seattle. After a series of such rooms in various towns, they finally leased a house. The next day Commander Clark was transferred. In Washington there were more hotel rooms and apartments. In desperation they bought a house in Chevy Chase, and they hope they're settled for a while.

"We still have furniture stored in seven different cities," she says and can still laugh about it, for she has a philosophy that the middle name of every Navy wife should be "readjustment."

Incidentaly, Mrs. Clark has a special bouquet to toss at Washington itself. "It is the most friendly town we have lived in so far," she maintains. "The permanent residents have been most kind to me, a transient service wife well used to the scorn of local people in other cities. When we bought our house last summer, the neighbors helped us put up awnings, lent us tools for the garden and have been warm and hospitable at all times."

Spanish Envoy To See Amaya

The Spanish Ambassador, Don Juan Francisco Cardenas, will be in the audience tonight when his countrywoman, Carmen Amaya, famous Spanish gypsy dancer, appears at Constitution Hall. Also in attendance will be the Marques de Fontana, with several guests.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be unable to see Senorita Amaya, who has danced for White House guests, as the First Lady is out of the city. Her box will be available to servicemen from Walter Reed Hospital.

Margaret Dunigan To Be Wed Soon

Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Dunigan announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to Ensign John L. Scully, jr.

Ensign Scully is now on duty with the Naval Air Transport Command, Terminal Island, Calif. Miss Dunigan, accompanied by her mother, will leave for California the end of the week, where the wedding will take place early in November.

The ceremony, performed by Chaplain Davis, USA, was held in the post chapel and was followed by a reception at the Officers Club.

Maj. George Fenton Cramer, USA, uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage.

She wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long torso bodice and elbow-length sleeves, and a full gathered skirt. Her tulle veil, finger-tip length was held with a coronet of twisted tulle caught with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook covered with white orchids. Mrs. H. Kent Ward was matron of honor.

Mrs. Cramer, aunt of the bride, assisted in receiving at the reception, with Mrs. Moore, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Karr, the bridegroom's mother. Mad Policy, another Virginia horse, owned by Miss Peggy Squiers of Middleburg, Va., took place honors.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

About a Senator's 'Un-Birthday Party'

"WHAT IS THIS—my birthday?" asked a surprised Senator Alben W. Barkley yesterday when he arrived in his Majority Leader office at the Capitol and found a number of guests assembled for a luncheon in his honor.

Senator Barkley

Well, it wasn't his birthday (that falls November 24)—nor the birthday of anybody else present. It was just one of those gayly informal noontime get-togethers that are all too rare in the hectic round of wartime Washington. Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, the former Laura ("Wahwee") Barkley, and Leslie Biffle, secretary to the Majority, arranged it on the spur of the moment, and gathered in a few congenial friends for the type of event Lewis Carroll would have called an "un-birthday party."

"Fine! Then I'm not a year older after all . . . and I don't have to tell my age," said the Senator, beaming . . . and breathing a sign of relief. In no time at all, the party was full speed ahead. Covers were laid for 12. Senator Barkley sat at one end of the long table; Mr. Biffle at the other. Others present took places where they pleased. Senator Lister Hill and Senator Burnet Maybank congratulated the guest of honor on looking so well on his unbirthday.

Secretary of the Senate, Col. Edwin A. Halsey, told a highly entertaining story about the handsome glass chandelier above the luncheon table. Seems Thomas Jefferson purchased it in France while he was serving as Ambassador there, and had it placed in the Capitol when he was Vice President. That opened the discussion as to the year he was elected and the year in which he became Chief Executive, and one thing led to another until finally, Mrs. MacArthur pointedly asked her father if he could name all the U. S. Presidents—in order.

"I'm not sure," he said, "because some of them were out of order!"

Nonetheless, he made the attempt, succeeded admirably, with only a slight bit of help from his son-in-law, Max O'Rell Truitt, who seems to be able to spin them off without taking a deep breath until he has finished.

Mrs. Truitt (the former Marian Barkley) observed that the party for her father was an especially pleasant interlude for her, since it gave her a chance for the first good rest she has had in several days. She has been in the throes of moving from a Cathedral Ave. house she and her husband recently sold, to their new home at 2435 Kalorama rd. Mrs. Arthur MacArthur entertained the luncheon company with a rhymed puzzle that proved so difficult she finally had to give the solution herself—although Mrs. Turner McBaine, and Mrs. Biffle came very near figuring it out just before a bell resounded through the room. That broke up the party. Senator Hill and Mr. Biffle were off to attend to the Nation's business on the Senate floor. In a few minutes, Senator Maybank was also summoned away, then the guest of honor was called, and finally the others of us decided we'd just as well depart.

THERE WASN'T MUCH made of it—not half enough, it seems to me—but a woman on Capitol Hill Tuesday played the leading role in the first drama of its kind ever enacted in the upper house of Congress. Senator Hattie Caraway was formally named acting President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

Senator Caraway

As you know, Vice President Wallace is still out of town on a speaking tour, and the regular President Pro Tempore, Senator Carter Glass, is ill; so in his absence Secretary Halsey read a letter from him designating Mrs. Caraway as the one "to perform the duties of the Chair during my absence."

The junior Senator from Arkansas, John L. McClellan, then made a few brief remarks pointing out that it was "the first time in the annals of this great deliberative, legislative body, a member of the gentle sex has officially opened the proceedings of the Senate." Following his speech, in which he paid high tribute not only to Senator Caraway but to all women of America, his feminine colleague took the chair and was President Pro Tempore for a day.

HE LOOKS TIRED and more serious and more thoughtful than ever . . . and he politely declines to talk at length about his recent frontline experiences. But wherever he goes, Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, the man who directed the unopposed occupation of Kiska Island by Canadian and American troops, is a special center of interest in Washington these days.

At a small gathering in Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn's apartment the other afternoon, all of us were clamoring to hear more about his exploits. But the officer who has so successfully commanded the North Pacific fleet does not waste words; he is not prone to dilate on his own experiences of those of his men. One thing he did observe, however, was that the "bloodless" Kiska campaign was not quite that. "More than 8000 Japs were killed by the relentless pounding of the Eleventh Air Force," he said.

Vice Admiral Kinkaid

Now on leave for a few days, he and his wife will spend the remainder of the week in Washington, later going to New York for a short stay before he returns to duty and she goes back to their home in Philadelphia.

Marjorie Downey In Engaged to Lieut. Knowlton

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Marjorie Adams Downey, daughter of Maj. Fairfax Davis Downey, USA., and Mrs. Downey of New York, to Lieut. William Allen Knowlton, USA, son of the late Frank Warren Knowlton of Weston, Mass., and the late Mrs. Richard Burlesson.

Miss Downey is the granddaughter of Mrs. Samuel S. Adams, of Washington, and the late Dr. Adams, and of Mrs. George F. Downey of Washington, and the late Brig. Gen. Downey. She is a graduate of the Brearley School, was introduced to society at the Junior Assemblies in 1942 and is a member of the New York Junior League.

Cagney Is Snugly Fitted In 'Johnny Come Lately'

"JOHNNY COME LATELY." Cagney independent production for release through United Artists, adapted by John Van Druten from Louis Bromfield's novel, "McLeod's Folly," starring James Cagney, with Grace George, Marjorie Main, Hattie McDaniel, Ed McNamara, Bill Henry, Robert Barratt, George Cleveland, Margaret Hamilton, Norman Willis, Lucien Littlefield, Edwin Stanley, Irving Bacon, Tom Dugan, Charles Irwin, John Sheehan, Clarence Muse and Marjorie Lord. Directed by William K. Howard. At Loew's Palace Theater.

COMBINING sentiment, fast action and comedy in well-measured proportions, and tinctured with an occasional squirt of slapstick that will prove reminiscent to aging memories of Mack Sennett's Keystone Kops, "Johnny Come Lately" should exert a huge appeal to picturegoers who enjoy James Cagney in both his gentler and more violent moods.

Adapted by John Van Druten from Louis Bromfield's story of "McLeod's Folly," the new feature, opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, follows a nostalgic formula that is as familiar as it is unfailingly interesting and warmly sympathetic—a sort of Jack-the-Giant-Killer yarn, shrewdly designed for the succor of a sweet old lady in distress and a bitter battle with the political powers of evil in a little Midwestern town in 1906.

The machine boss runs the town to suit himself and his pocketbook, with the only opposition expressed through the columns of the Shield and Banner, the valiant little newspaper Vinnie McLeod has inherited from her late crusading husband. The politico, who holds all the important notes of everybody in the county through connivance with the browbeaten bankers, is on the eve of foreclosing Mrs. McLeod into the poorhouse, when Tom Richards, vagabond reporter, drops off a freight, is picked up for vagrancy and bailed out of a crooked court by "Miss Vinnie" through the sheer kindness of her heart. At that moment a fighting member was added to the staff of the Shield and Banner.

From this point on, Master Richards finds himself at grips with a man-sized job in unseating the tyrant. His quest for the "soft underbelly" of the political empire, leads through Gashouse Mary's pleasure spot—operated "strictly on the level," but with frontier frankness—to the State boss, who once almost married her; in and out of several lusty brawls and the city calaboose, straight into the hair of the grafter who wasn't as big as he thought he was. On the side, the boss' son and Mrs. McLeod's niece whip up a harried romance in which Tom also is remotely involved and, altogether, no trick is missed in piling up a succession of tense and suspenseful situations that give the Cagney talents an all-out field day.

A Well-Played Action Piece

In their first independent production for United Artists release, Producer Bill and star-brother Jimmy Cagney have assembled a cast that cashes in the Van Druten script for all it is worth. The Richards role was precisely cut to the measure of the acting Cagney, who, on occasion, can be as tender as on others he can be tempestuous. He displays both facets of his art with consummate skill. Making her debut in pictures, the venerable Grace George brings all of the qualities of gentleness, fortitude and charm to be expected of one of the theater's most beloved and able actresses to the kindly role of Vinnie.

Edward McNamara, usually on the side of the law in the uniform of a policeman, is a nice selection for the thankless role of the oily and odorous city hall grafter, and the tangled romantic vein is effectively run out by Bill Henry and Marjorie Lord.

In a part that fits her as well as her bizarre costumes as queen of the rowdily "genteel" resort she conducts with such punctilious propriety, Marjorie Main makes Gashouse Mary a vitally important and inspiriting figure. Hattie McDaniel is in there pitching pith, too, as the McLeod maid, and George Cleveland and Margaret Hamilton have important fingers in the comic aspects of the story. Robert Barratt, Lucien Littlefield, Irving Bacon, Clarence Muse and a long list of others contribute largely to the high voltage of a picture that still finds it possible to tone itself down, now and again, to periods of tenderness and warmly human relationships.

Those attending the first new feature on the Palace screen in five weeks will be further diverted by Pete Smith's "Football Thrills of 1942," given additional zip by the producer's humorous commentary; a laughable cartoon comedy, "The Uninvited Pest," the Government's ubiquitous "Suggestion Box" and the latest symposium of picturized news events. A worthy piece of pastiming, all in all.

A Dispensation for the Disappointed

As a compassionate gesture in behalf of those who failed to apply for tickets to "Oklahoma" until after the National Theater had been completely sold out for two weeks, the Theater Guild and house managements announce two extra performances of the sensational musical—one next Sunday night, October 24; the other, a matinee next Thursday, one week from today.

Seats go on sale at the box-office this morning at the regular scale of prices—from $1.10 to $3.85 for the Sunday night performance; $1.10 to $2.75 for the Thursday matinee on October 28.

If you can do with a friendly tip, it would be to present yourself at the box-office in person, money in hand, and not risk the delay of a mail order or the uncertainty of a phone call. Unless all signs fail, these added performances will be sold out as speedily as the original engagement. Better be there this morning "in the flesh."

'Rancho Grande' Clicks at Little

By Marjorie Kelly.

It would seem obvious that good-neighborly gestures should cross the Rio Grande in both directions; but in the entertainment field this is just beginning to be so. Mexicans have seen many American pictures, while for most Washingtonians "Rancho Grande," which yesterday morning opened at the Little Theater, will be the first Mexican film they have ever had an opportunity to view.

"Rancho Grande" will have a double interest, because in addition to being a refreshing, entertaining musical romance, it displays authentic dances, songs, and costumes of our neighbors south of the border.

There is a freshness and naivete about this film that would never be found in a Hollywood product. The plot is that of the immemorial folk tale about the wicked stepmother and the unwanted stepdaughter, who grows up beautiful. The story is embellished and modernized, but retains its fairytale charm. And it is told often with the earthy frankness which characterizes the folk-tale.

The Mexicans have taken a good-natured dig at their northern neighbors in that the only North American in the film is an obstreperous fellow who makes a fool of himself at a cockfight, yelling "Whoopee!" making bad jokes in English and looking injured when nobody laughs, and getting pushed on his face when he interferes in a fight between two Mexicans.

Handsome Tito Guizar is the only member of the cast at all familiar to our audiences. He sings delightfully and has a shyly engaging personality. Esther Fernandez, as his sweetheart; Emma Roldan, as a sharp-tongued old harridan, and Carlos Lopez, as her drunken companion, contribute excellent performances.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Will Change Her Pace

New York, Oct. 20 (INS).—Paulette Goddard, who has been knocking San Francisco cold with her Mexican wardrobe, will have to slow down for England's Eighteenth Century styles when she makes "Kitty," at Paramount. Buddy de Sylva bought the Rosamond Marshall novel from the galley proofs as a costarring vehicle for Paulette and Ray Milland. It's a period drama about a woman who finds happiness in her second marriage. Ray's role is equally strong.

PAULETTE GODDARD

The dark horse in the race for "Dorian Gray" is Hurd Hatfield. You may or may not have heard about this young actor from Broadway, who is currently playing the younger son in "Dragon Seed." He isn't a well known name, yet. But Pan Berman and Director Albert Lewin made a test of him that turned out so well they made more extensive tests. It is a difficult role to cast because Oscar Wilde's hero is both good and bad. Herbert Marshall is the only other player set for the picture at M-G-M.

Chatter in Hollywood: Ever since Louise Randall Pierson has been in Hollywood working on the adaptation of her book, "Roughly Speaking," her first husband has been writing her regularly. He wants Franchot Tone to play him in the Warner movie. It is the part of "Rodney in the book, and so far no one, including Mrs. Pierson, can figure out whether her ex is a Franchot Tone movie fan, or whether that is the way he wants the public to think of him.

Snapshots of New York and Hollywood Collected at Random: Those beautiful orchids in Katherine Hepburn's dressing room every day are from Turhan Bey; Victor Mature not only got his pooch, Genius, back from Rita Hayworth, but he's taking his namesake East with him in the fond hope he can talk the Coast Guard into letting him be mascot on his ship.

The natives of Vermont went so crazy over Charlie Laughton on his recent bond trip that he's been officially adopted as a native son; Diana Barrymore will be back on Broadway the minute she finishes "When Ladies Fly." She is making no secret about being discouraged with her movie career.

HEDDA HOPPER

The Lusty Laughton Waxes Poetic

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 20.—Charles Laughton waxing poetic as the ghost in Oscar Wilde's "Canterville Ghost." He's crazy about Director Jules Dassin. There at Metro were Robert Young, William Gargan, Rags Ragland and more American doughboys running through a medieval castle in their B. V. D.'s after Laughton, who's transparent most of the time, thanks to Irving Reis. Reis is the unsung hero of all special effects and dream sequences at Metro. He made the earthquake in San Francisco, contrived the flight of locusts in "Good Earth," and shares his secrets with no one. After getting Laughton through a keyhole—no mean feat, that—Reis went home, found he'd lost his key and couldn't get through the door of his own home. He legged it up a ladder and through a second story window. Ghosting is a nerve-razzling business, but Laughton's got his subconscious into it now. The picture sounds like an escapist's delight.

CHARLES LAUGHTON

Girl He Left Behind

Bella Spewak had packed and was ready to join her husband, Sam, in London, to write a story for Alex Korda, when she read that Sam had left for Moscow on a job for the Office of War Information. Bella has been here on a job for Edgar Bergen. She tried to rewrite "The Great Gabbo," which starred Eric von Stroheim years ago. But she soon saw that the actor and the story didn't jibe, so she did an original story on John and Priscilla Alden theme, with Charles urging his mouthpiece to be more aggressive. She named it "The Girl With An Act," but the whole thing fell through. Bergen wanted her to linger and write for radio, but "no man walks alone in that," says Bella. "They eat, sleep and tie bow-knots together—making it a social festival" . . . Bing Crosby takes off October 28 for a much needed rest on his Nevada ranch, after the last strenuous weeks of picture making, camp shows and his regular broadcast. He expects to get in some hunting and fishing while Bob Hope and other stars feed you laughs from Bing's air show.

Soldier Philosopher

Spec McClure, one of my assistants, writes from England: "The Army has been a tremendous experience. I've become absorbed in all its ramifications. It's hard to believe any world exists other than that peopled by arms and uniforms. The world I left seems as remote and fantastic as the lost Atlantis and to write seems almost as futile as writing to the dead—so far apart are the two worlds. By nature I cannot live between worlds, so I had to choose the one made imperative by circumstances, and also by nature, and live it to the hilt. Don't mistake me. I have not become a model soldier, nor is the above the typical soldier's attitude. He, I believe, lives between two worlds, the world of home and peace, and the world of war, and from this springs his heartsickness, his loneliness and dissatisfaction. None of which makes him the less a man or warrior, but does prevent the serenity and contentment with alien circumstances which cannot be altered. I was never one to eat my heart out over the inevitable. I follow the old Chinese proverb—'relax and enjoy yourself'."

Glamour Under Fire

Note from Anna Lee, who went overseas with Jack Benny but lingered on, sends beauty advice for gals contemplating a trip over to entertain our men. "Shampooing hair in a tin helmet is most difficult," she writes. "But I found shaving soap a good substitute for soap. Gin makes a good dry shampoo if you can get the gin. I use shaving cream for skin food and GI butter for removing make-up. I wear cowboy boots instead of evening sandals under my evening gowns. In central Africa flying beetles are the size of baseballs. But I'll cherish this experience more than an Academy Award. In places where men haven't seen a woman, either white or black, in 18 months, boys asked if they could just come up and smell me. They want to remember what their girls smell like. When I get home I expect to live on ice cream, coca cola and hamburgers for at least a week."

They're Good, Too

Jack Benny is bringing Minerva Pius and John Brown, from the Fred Allen show, for his . . . The other day Jack got a picture of a young flyer and his bride. With the snapshot the bride sent this note: "Dear Mr. Benny! I'm sending you this picture so that you can recognize my husband. He wrote from Tunis that he had a picture taken there with you. I had word from the War Department that he was just killed in action. I wonder whether you could identify him from this enclosed snapshot and send me a copy of the picture of you and him together, because that's the last one he ever had taken."

Seeing Is Believing

Adela Rogers St. John's story for Mary Pickford will run as a serial in a magazine, but I doubt if it ever hits the screen. United Artists swears Mary actually will produce "Junior Miss" in February, but seeing is believing, say I.

Ray Milland Is Expert Gardener

Hollywood.—One of the most expert of all Hollywood Victory gardeners is Ray Milland. Most of them are more enthusiastic than expert. But Ray really knows his vegetables . . . especially his potatoes.

Every night during filming of his latest picture, "The Uninvited," Ray rushed home to tend his precious potato plants. He has made them decorative as well as useful. Has them set out as borders around the trees and major shrubs at his Beverly Hills home.

Ray got an early start as a gardener. At the age of 7, when he lived in Wales, he grew a bed of nasturtiums that flowered to spell out the words: "God Save the King!"

Times Square Tattle

New York, Oct. 20.

Wendell Willkie hopes to swing the Republican convention to Cleveland next year. He'll fight against its going to McCormick's Chicago . . . Willkie, incidentally, will make two speeches this week —the first, in Syracuse, supporting Hanley for lieutenant governor, and the second in Washington, where he will address the Republican freshmen Congressmen . . . The newest dark horse to succeed Prentiss Brown as head of OPA is General Fleming, formerly of WPA and now with the Federal Works Administration. Brown may accept a banking post in Detroit . . . One of the three Scottsboro boys remaining in jail will be freed shortly.

JAMES J. BRADDOCK

Although Italy now is a cobelligerent with us, Mayor LaGuardia expects to continue his broadcasts to Italy . . . A new Army order will halt the granting of commissions to civilians, for military administration, except in rare high-specialty cases . . . Lieut. Jim Braddock, the former heavyweight champion, has been operated upon at Fort Hamilton . . . Abe Lyman is taking 16 of his orchestra overseas to entertain the troops in Africa. The rest of Lyman's orchestra were classified 1-A last week . . . Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey is permitting his divorced wife, Hannah Williams, to see their children whenever she wants to.

The OWI now demands advance copies of Leon Henderson's broadcasts . . . The oil companies attacked by Henderson have demanded equal radio time in which to make their reply . . . Last week Bernard Baruch invited Henderson to confer with him at the usual office—the park bench across the street from the White House. When the rains came, Baruch invited him to move "indoors"—under a tree, where the talks continued . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins will move to their new home on November 15 . . . The OPA is seeking a public-spirited citizen who is willing to accept the job of rent administrator for the New York area. Salary, nil; headaches, great.

Lieutenant "Mutt" Womer is the University of Virginia Law School graduate whose prize fight career was sponsored at the time by his classmates, F. D. R., jr., and Marshall Field 4th. Womer finally obtained a match at Madison Square Garden against Billy Conn's brother, Jackie Conn. Last week Lieutenant Womer, back from Australia, was to have fought an exhibition bout with Billy Conn at Richmond. But the Army halted the bout, because Billy is an enlisted man and Womer an officer . . . Olsen and Johnson, who grossed 12 million dollars with "Hellzapoppin' " and "Sons O' Fun," are planning to brave new ideas for their next show . . . Meyer Davis, whose orchestra played at the debut of Martha Hodge, now is backing her production of "Penelope."

Paula Lawrence's contract with "One Touch of Venus" provides that she is to have a night off on the day Moss Hart's Air Force show, "Winged Victory," opens in New York. Miss Lawrence will attend the opening with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins . . . At a Hollywood reception, Bill Goetz tapped Mrs. Jack Benny and said: "I want you to meet two Charlie Chans"—and presented T. V. Soong and Dr. Wellington Koo . . . Miguel Covarrubias, the Mexican artist, has abandoned painting for archeology for the duration . . . The receipts from the first performance of "This Is the Army" in London will be used to buy new uniforms for the cast, to replace the tattered ones.

King Christian of Denmark finally was warned that if he persists in his flouting of the Nazi will and continues his obstructionist tactics, he will be accompanied by a Storm Trooper who will have a gun at the King's back. The Crown Prince then volunteered to assume the responsibility of issuing the noncollaboration decrees. "No, I will continue," the King told him. "I am old, you still have your life ahead of you."

Someone said to former Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff: "About Fala, the President's pet—Fala has done a lot for the President, hasn't it?" Litvinoff replied: "Not as much as the President has done for Fala."

Forgotten Hilltop Provides Revenue

The Larkin Fitch family of Mesa, Ariz., is a little puzzled about what makes a movie location and why. Paramount used a hill on their property for scenes in "The Hour Before the Dawn," the Somerset Maugham story which stars Veronica Lake and Franchot Tone.

Paramount had to get away from California to find a green hill which looked like England where scenes could be shot at night. Arizona was the closest spot with any such scenery.

The Fitch family visited the site daily to see it being used as a glamour spot. They couldn't understand the quirks of film fate which made this unproductive and rocky hilltop of movie value. In fact, although the family has owned the hill since 1933, Mrs. Fitch and her two daughters had never even set a foot on the hill before.

Song Added

"Suddenly It's Spring," ballad by Johnny Burke van Heusen, was added to the Ira Gershwin-Kurt Weill musical score for Paramount's "Lady in the Dark," Technicolor picturization of the Broadway stage hit, and is sung by Ginger Rogers.

Psychologist Says Esquire Art Is Clean

By the Associated Press

In the scholarly, scientifically determined opinion of a Boston Neuropsychologist, the Varga Girls in Esquire Magazine are "good clean pictures, glorifying good figures, and a tribute to American womanhood."

Testifying yesterday at a Postoffice Department hearing on the magazine's rights to retain second-class mailing privileges, Dr. Kenneth J. Tillotson, who commented "I have always admired the Varga Girls very much," said he had shown the drawings to 40 friends and acquaintances.

"Some of the women thought the feet were too large or too small sometimes," he reported. "The men thought they were beautiful."

Spectators in a cramped Postoffice Department hearing room scanned exhibits of the magazine, and the three members of the hearing board studied them closely as Calvin Hassell, assistant solicitor of the department, questioned Doctor Tillotson.

The 40 friends and acquaintances, Dr. Tillotson testified, included two preadolescents, one adolescent, and men and women ranging in age from 20 to 55. They were unanimous, he insisted several times, in the opinion that there was "nothing obscene, lewd, lascivious or dirty" in any of the magazines they inspected at his request.

Tillotson agreed with Hassell that some of the magazine's cartoons are "a little spicy," and defined the term as "a little suggestive, off-color, or having a double meaning." He commented that, in his opinion, they would appeal more to men than women.

DOCTORS HOSPITAL

Human life and health of the people are said to exceed all other economic resources. Nurses are needed by the armed forces, and if we are to carry on we must train nurses' attendants to help the nurses who are left at home.

To do this we must have honest, reliable employes who are interested in helping take care of sick people.

We give a year's course with a certificate as a nurses' attendant at the end of that time. Salary begins the day your classes start. (The course begins Nov. 16, 1943). Uniforms, laundry, three meals, and medical care are furnished.

If you want to increase your usefulness, gain valuable experience and future security, earning as you go along, apply to the nursing office, Doctors Hospital, 1815 Eye Street N.W.
